U.S. Rocket Roars Into Space Aimed at Orbit Around Sun

RALPH McGILL

A School Is Not a Dance

Two eminent authorities recently and forthrightly have spoken out on educational issues. They are Dr. Robert F. Goheen, president of Princeton University, and Arthur S. Flemming, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

The fact that the former's discussion was at the university level and the latter at the public school, elementary and secondary, does not make them here incompatible.

Dr. Goheen gave us a newly phrased concept of education. He said, first, that there is little in the experience of most high schools, or American homes, to indicate that "the Utopian theory" of substituting more independent study for faculty guidance will work.

"The fact is," he continued, "that education, as distinguished from mere training, is a tailor-made creative process. It can never be cheap and the American people must sooner or later face this fact squarely," he concluded.

No one would deny that education is not mere training. It is, of necessity, a continuing, creative process in charge of teachers.

A school is a place for education. Going to school is not a social function in the sense of attending a dance, a party, or a tea. It is a serious, important business of preparing for life—a full life.

Part of Agony

It is precisely this "social" feature of education which is a part of the South's present agony and travail. The South has been, and still largely is, a rural region. All through the years the schoolhouse has been a social center for countless communities which lacked any public building save the courthouse. It was to the school that many social groups came for club meetings, lectures, musicals, and entertainment. This is still true in countless communities. This was not, and is not, a bad thing. It was good to have the life of the people centered about the best symbols they had — the schoolhouse and education.

But it had one negative result. It created the image of education as being merely a part of the purely social life—of dances, parties and close, personal association.

Not a Function

That became the image of "going to school." The truth is that while this was pleasant and enjoyable, it is not at all a function of the school. It can always be provided by private groups or social organizations. The dances can be held and receptions given without any school connection. This is the pattern in larger cities —and has long been the custom. A school, with all the social frills cut off, is essentially a place to go and be taught. It is not a society event. Secretary Arthur S. Flemming points out that in two states school children have already lost the equivalent of a stunning 1,000,000 pupil days.

Teachers who have put their whole lives in public schools now see falling apart that to which they have given so much of themselves. Both they and their pupils are experiencing quite understandable fears and insecurity.

The teachers know that at very best a "private system" can adequately educate but a relative few. It can give an educational "lick and promise" to most. A large percentage will not go to school at all, lacking a compulsory school law and enough money to pay for private schooling. Countless "private schools" for quick profit will complicate the problem.

As business and industrial leaders are quick to point out, all this will have a catastrophic effect on the economics of the farmer, the car dealer, the businessman and the industrial worker.

Most rural counties receive 80 per cent or more of their total school costs from the state. Their economy, too, would be severely damaged by loss of this income. Our desperate need is for more education, not less. If we can think of going to school without the unnecessary social functions we now associate with it, we will have helped our thinking.

A state may close its schools if it chooses. But it is important we understand the price.

Bright Told Of Bombing, Witness Says

By RICHARD ASHWORTH

The state rested its case Friday against George Bright after Bright's former cell mate testified Bright told him he acted as a "lookout" while co-defendant Richard Bolling placed the dynamite charge that blasted the Jewish Temple here Oct. 12.

Shortly after the dramatic testimony came in Fulton Superior Court from Jimmy Dave DeVore, 33, of 1302 Star Dr., NE, the defense began introducing testimony to discredit the state's case.

Among the first witnesses the defense used were three Ku Klux Klansmen, including Imperial Wizard E. L. Edwards, and chairman Arthur Cole of the National States' Rights Party, in which Bright was active.

The Klansmen, besides Edwards, identified themselves as John Felmet of 2748 Bankhead Highway, a painter who said he has been reelected Klan treasurer, and Wesley Morgan of 27 Gould St., SE, who said he is president of N. B. Forrest No. 1, U.S. Klans, Knights of the Ku Klux Klans.

They were used in an attempt to discredit testimony of L. E. Rogers, an undercover employe for the FBI, who told of Bright's activities in the anti-Semitic organization. All three Klansmen said they would not believe Rogers under oath.

During Cole's appearance on the stand, Assistant Sol. Gen. Tom Luck Jr. questioned him about a letter written by a party official in which Atlanta was given as a target for the party's activities because of the death

The letter, written by Dr. Ed Fields, identified as a Kentuckian and an official of the National States Rights Party, to Billy

Lost Pump Located in Lee Prison

A water pump "missing" from the Corrections Dept. was not really lost, it developed Friday. It has been in use for two years at the prison in the director's home county.

Director Jack Forrester said the gasoline-powered pump was located through the workings of a rigid inventory system the department has installed in recent months.

Disappearance of the pump from the Wayne Prison Branch at Jesup received considerable publicity last March. Corrections officials were unable to locate it at that time, despite taking inventories at its prison branches.

An audit released Thursday by State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. listed the serial number of the pump. That provided the necessary clue, Forrester said.

The director said the serial number rang a bell for department treasurer M. H. Doyle.

Doyle checked and found the same number listed on a card showing the transfer of a pump from the Lee County Prison Branch to the Decatur County Branch.

The pump had been listed on an inventory of the Lee branch last March but was not associated with the "missing" pump because the serial number was not recorded.

The pump had been used during road construction work at the Lee branch.

"I've seen it myself for two years down there," Forrester reported.

Under a new inventory system initiated by Forrester this year, transfer of equipment must be reported twice: by the superintendent of the camp giving it up

Democrats Overrule Louisianans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic National Credentials Committee rejected, 7-2, Friday night a move to oust Camille F. Gravel Jr. as Louisiana national committeeman. In a decision reflecting National committee views on the explosive civil rights issue, the credentials group turned down a plea to seat Jatt M. Talbot as Louisiana committeeman.

Several hours later, however, Southern members of the national committee voted 14 to 5 to insist on Gravel's removal when the issue is placed before the full membership of the national committee Saturday.

100 MEMBERS

They faced almost certain defeat. The full committee, which has more than 100 members, was expected to give its support to the credentials group which voted 7 to 2 to keep Gravel.

Previously the Louisiana State Committee had voted to oust Gravel because it contended he was out of step with Louisiana Democrats' opposition to integration. The state committee had chosen Talbot to succeed Gravel.

CLOSED DOORS

The Credentials Committee's decision, taken behind closed doors after a four-hour public hearing, was announced by Calvin Rawlings Jr., Utah national committeeman, and chairman of the group.

Gravel backers took the position that the national committeeman was the target of a dastardly plot by leaders of a movement to form another party—by men who they said have been consistently disloyal to the Democratic party and its platforms.

Ill-concealed threats of a Southern rebellion were sounded mainly by Sam H. Jones, former Louisiana governor, who made no attempt to deny that he had not supported the Democratic presidential slates in 1948, 1952, and 1956.

E. Germans Hold Lost U.S. Pilot

BERLIN (AP)—The East-West dispute over Berlin sharpened Friday with detention of a U.S. Army pilot by the East German Communists.

The capture of Lt. Richard Mackin of Washington, D.C., was belatedly acknowledged two days after he became lost on a flight near the East-West border and radioed he was having to bail out.

An East German official hinted the American might be used as a hostage to aid the satellite regime's drive for recognition by the Western powers. U.S. officials in Berlin at once made clear they would not negotiate with the East Germans.

The explosive issue in the Berlin crisis centers on Western refusal to negotiate with the East Germans—even on the right of access to this isolated city 110 miles inside East Germany.

West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, here to rally the West Berliners against the Communist threat, declared that the United States, Britain and France would stick by their pledges to Berlin.

Aside from the promise to defend the city against attack, the Allies are committed to avoid any recognition of the East German regime.

After conferring with Adenauer and Foreign Minister Heinrich von Bretano, West Berlin Mayor Willy

Pioneer III Is Pointed Past Moon

Expected To Go Half Million Miles

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A huge, bullet-shaped Army rocket thundered skyward early Saturday, carrying space probe Pioneer III on a journey that could cover almost half a million miles.

In Washington, a source identified with the project said all four stages of the rocket had fired.

At Fort Monmouth, N.J., a spokesman for the army signal research and development laboratory here said the radio signal from Juno II was picked up four minutes after lift-off.

The continuous beep signal was picked up intermittently since then, he said, adding that it was pretty well buried in extraneous noise.

The mission of this first of two Army space tests was to blast a 13-pound satellite past the moon and deep into outer space where it would swing into an orbit around the sun.

If the daring stab into space is successful, Pioneer III would travel farther than any other man-made object and become the first artificial planet.

The powerful Juno II missile roared aloft with a dazzling flash of white flame and smoke at 12:45 A.M. EST.

The 76-foot space craft climbed ponderously at first into the starless Florida sky, but seconds later it began to accelerate rapidly.

After about 60 seconds, the rocket's nose curved gracefully and arched toward the northeast.

U.S. Defied By Judge on Voter Lists

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Circuit Judge George Wallace in state court said Friday he will jail any civil rights commission agent who tries to get voter registration records he has impounded.

The commission has subpoened the files for Barbour and Bullock counties and has served formal demand on Wallace to produce them.

He said Friday he will defy the subpoena, and added:

"I will jail any civil rights commission agent who attempts to take the records."

The judge said he has already instructed Sheriff Bill Adams in Barbour County to arrest any agent who tries to get the files.

Wallace made the statement at his office in Clayton, Ala.

The judge declined to say what he might do if a federal court orders the voting records produced for the Civil Rights Commission's first hearing which opens here Monday.

"That's another bridge I will cross when I come to it."

Neither would he say whether he plans to appear at the hearing—without the records.

Alabaman Given 10 Years in Blast

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—An admitted Ku Klux Klansman was convicted Friday of bombing a Negro home, and sentenced to 10 years in prison by a jury which recommended probation.

The jury returned the verdict after deliberating more than five hours.

Judge Wallace Gibson said he would formally pass the sentence fixed by the jury for the man, Hubert Eugene Wilcutt, on Jan. 9. Wilcutt was the first person brought to trial in connection with bombings of Negro homes and churches which began in 1948.

The jury could have called for a maximum sentence of death for bombing an inhabited dwelling.

Two other white men arrested with Wilcutt, after bombs were exploded in a former all-white residential section, are awaiting trial.

The bombings occurred last July 17. Negro residents of the area seized and beat two white men before turning them over to police.

Defense attorney George Rogers in his closing remarks to the jury said that if it returned a guilty verdict, "You'll see Negroes spreading out like a cancer into every white community."

"Blood will flow in the streets of Birmingham," he declared.

Prosecutor E. C. Watson said law and order must be maintained.

Wilcutt said in one of two statements that he made to police that he was a member of an East Birmingham Ku Klux Klan group.

He remained free on $5,000 bond.

Abandon Ship: Sinking of the Indianapolis

Sun and a Burning Thirst Take Huge Toll in Salt Sea

Seventh of 15 installments of the tragic story of the sinking by the Japanese of the U.S. cruiser Indianapolis with 1,200 men aboard and its shocking aftermath.

By RICHARD F. NEWCOMB

The heavy weather in which the Indianapolis plunged on to her death went away with her. Monday, July 30, 1945, dawned clear. The sun rose comfortingly for the survivors of the torpedoed cruiser. It showed men whom the night had hidden blackly from each other that they were not alone in that immense, fearful sea.

There were gatherings in two large groups and a dozen or more small, scattered clusters. In perhaps the largest group — some 300 men that first day—Lt. Cmdr. Lewis Haynes of Chelsea, Mass., took charge. Cmdr. Stanley Lipski, the gunnery officer, was the senior officer present, but Lipski was clearly dying. The flesh on his hands had been burned down to the tendons, and his eyes were burned closed. Shipmates gathered round him and tried to hold his tortured body out of the stinging salt sea and oil. Lt. Cmdr. Lewis L. "Doc" Haynes, whose own serious burns did not keep him from paddling around, trying to give medical attention, was unable to lessen Lipski's agony.

A cork life ring bobbed up and it was given the severely injured. A long piece of rope enabled other men to feel better. It was formed into a large circle, and perhaps 150 men clung around the perimeter. There were many other arrangements with debris —one man clung to a toilet seat. Harold J. Schecterle, radarman, of Shattuckville, Mass., just out of sick bay minus his appendix, latched onto a lard can. He occasionally dipped into the contents to still hunger pangs, and alternately used the top as a heliograph.

Less than 1,000 yards away from the first big group at the start, was a second large group. Whatever the number at the start, by dawn Monday death had weeded it down to 120 men and perhaps eight to 10 officers. Senior of these was Lt. Cmdr. Dick Redmayne of New York City. He found himself in command of three small rafts, one floater net, some five-inch ammo cans and

Red Demand for Veto Splits U.S., Britain at Atomic Talks

GENEVA (AP)—The United States and Britain differed Friday over the veto power which the Soviet Union demands in the proposed commission for policing a nuclear weapons test ban.

Delegates met in a drafting committee to work out the opening articles of a treaty for a controlled suspension of tests.

The three powers clearly have come to an understanding that the commission should permanently reflect their present predominant status in nuclear armaments. But they are split over details.

The Soviet Union wants all other nations permanently excluded from membership. It also expects each of the Big Three nations to hold veto power over the control system.

The United States and Britain, which favor election of other nations as nonpermanent members, are united in their determination to oppose any Russian veto on inspection teams' movements and reports.

However, the British are sympathetic to the Russian demand for voting equality with the West so far as administrative questions, such as the organization's budget or the appointment of officials, are concerned.

The United States considers any voting parity system as giving the Russians a built-in veto. The U.S. delegation believes vetoes on operational or administrative questions to be equally dangerous.

Although details of the voting procedure have not yet been discussed in the conference, the British feel that none of three powers can be denied a veto at the administrative level.

In the bargaining ahead the British appear prepared to propose a choice:

1. If the inspection teams can operate automatically without any interference, a veto arrangement in the commission on strictly administrative matters would be allowed.

2. Alternatively, if the inspection teams are to be under direct surveillance by the commission—as the Russians demand — the commission itself cannot be subject to a veto.

The chief delegates will meet Saturday to review the intial work of the six-man drafting committee.

Europeans To Meet To Avert Trade War

LONDON (AP)—The main nations of non-Communist Europe rushed preparations for special economic talks to stave off a trade war looming next year.

A British Treasury announcement Friday said the ministerial council of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation will meet in the near future.

The stated purpose is to discuss temporary working arrangements between the six members of the common market—which goes into business Jan. 1—and the remaining 11 other OEEC countries.

ECONOMIC RIVALRY

Behind the announcement lies a story of British-French economic rivalry. The British had proposed a small meeting of key European economic leaders to be held next week under the chairmanship of Britain's Reginald Maudling. But they have had to bow to France's insistence on wider talks to be presided over by Walter Hallstein of West Germany.

The threat of a trade war flows from the plans of the six common market countries to cut tariffs by 10 per cent and raise import quotas by 20 per cent among each other.

This will hit nations such as Britain which long marketed its cars, textiles and other consumer goods in the common market area, embracing France, West Germany Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg.

TEMPORARY PLAN

These six countries Thursday sent Ludwig Erhard, West German vice chancellor, to persuade British leaders to accept a temporary plan designed to reduce possible discrimination to a minimum.

Erhard's proposals broadly envisaged a one-year arrangement whereby the 11 nonmembers could share some of the benefits of the lower tariffs, higher quotas being introduced by the six next year, and a method of negotiating a more lasting working arrangement between the two groups of nations.

The British government takes the view these proposals do not entirely rule out discrimination by the six against outsiders. It is also looking at possible protective measures — possibly barriers against the six—to cushion the national economy.

U.N. Council To Take Up Israel Case

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI)—The Security Council will meet at 3 p.m. (EST), Monday to take up Israel's complaint of "aggression" by United Arab Republic armed forces, it was announced Friday.

Israel Thursday asked for an urgent meeting of the 11-member council to consider charges of artillery attacks by the United Arab Republic on seven Israeli villages along the Syrian border.

Swedish Ambassador Gunnar V. Jarring, president of the council for December, consulted with the other members and Friday set the meeting time.

Dispatches from Israel said the border attack, which occurred on Wednesday in the trouble-ridden Huleh area north of the Sea of Galilee, touched off a heavy artillery duel.

Substantial Budget Cut Is Expected

Constitution State News Service

NEW YORK—A prediction that the 1960 federal budget will be a "definite reduction—a very significant one" was made Friday by Maurice H. Stans, director of the budget.

Declining to give a money figure, the top administration official said expenditures for the fiscal year beginning July 1 would be contained in a "tight budget."

ARMS NEEDS

The current budget is $79,200,000,000. Forecasts are that it will be pushed beyond this figure by defense needs and agricultural payments.

Stans offered no hope that the anticipated deficit for the current year of $12,000,000,000 can be reduced, and said it "could, if we are not careful, go higher before we are through the year."

RECENT CONFERENCES

Indications after recent meetings among President Eisenhower, secretar yof defense McElroy and Stans have been that defense spending might go up as much as a billion dollars next year. In his talk, Stans emphasized the costliness of new weapons, and said, "Military costs will in all likelihood continue to absorb 50 per cent or more of the total government budget for a long time to come."

The savings would come in domestic costs, and, Stans said:

"Nobody should be surprised if in the President's budget message there are a number of other proposals made to scale down or eliminate government services."

Forbidden Test Kills 3 Rocket Scientists

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP)—Three highly skilled young chemical engineers were killed and two others injured critically Friday in a forbidden rocket experiment.

Maintenance men working nearby suffered minor injuries as the premature blast shattered windows in their building at the Callery Chemical Co. plant where all were employed.

Associates reported the five engineers represented "some of the finest technical brains in the nation in this particular—exotic fuel—line."

Dead were Charles I. Sattes, 31; William S. Reynolds, 29; and Frank K. Wengrzyn, 24.

Hospitalized were Richard A. Wright, 26, and Elmer Boyd, 38.

The maintenance workers, who had no connection with the experiment, were treated for lacerations from flying glass. They were Ben Leavitt, Tonganoxie, Kan., and Joe Longstreth, Baldwin, Kansas.

The rocket exploded near a waste chemical furnace in a remote section of the company grounds.

There was no damage to the multimillion-dollar plant, which is under Navy contract. It has been in operation since May, turning out boron compounds used to fuel missiles and jet engines.

"This sort of activity is against all company regulations," said R. G. Schmidt, plant manager.

"This is a grim lesson for makers of home-made rockets when five graduate chemical engineers have one blow up on them. They should have known they were playing with fire. After all, they were engineers."

Schmidt added that the five engineers were allowed to pass through security gates without question because their work sometimes required 24-hour duty.

EAL Meets Mechanics' Pay Demand

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Eastern Air Lines said Friday it has offered to meet its striking mechanics' top wage demands but has not received a reply from the International Association of Machinists.

IAM officials could not be reached for comment.

Eastern said it had offered to meet their request for a 44-to-49-cents-an-hour, top-money raise, and said this was one to four cents more than the machinists settled for with four other airlines.

The office of Gov. Collins said the governor has been in direct contact with the White House concerning the 12-day strike of mechanics and flight engineers, which a Miami business research firm estimates to have cost Florida 6½ million dollars.

Rebels, Cuba Cry 'Victory' After Battle

HAVANA (UPI) —The Cuban Army said Friday 250 rebels were killed and 20 captured in a three-day battle for control of the small village of Guisa, Oriente Province. It listed only six army casualties.

Both the army and the rebels described the battle as the biggest in Cuba's two-year-old revolt, but they made conflicting claims to victory.

The rebel radio claimed more than 200 casualties were inflicted on government forces, which retired "after suffering one of the biggest defeats in the present war."

Guisa is about 15 miles southeast of Bayamo, in the northern foothills of the Sierra Maestra Mountains.

House Panel To Look Into Defeat of Hays

WASHINGTON (AP)—A House committee Friday took the first steps toward a possible inquiry into the election of segregationist Dale Alford to Congress over Rep. Brooks Hays of Little Rock, Ark. The committee, which was set up to check on campaign expenditures, said it would consider a complaint alleging irregularities in the write-in campaign by Alford. The complaint came from John F. Wells, publisher of the weekly Arkansas Recorder.

Rep. Cliff Davis (D-Tenn) heads the special committee.

PICKRICK SAYS

LESTER MADDOX

Just one year ago, this December 4th, there were 24,000 citizens of Atlanta who went out on a cold, dreary day and voted that they would like for me to serve as mayor of their city.

FOR THIS SUPPORT

and confidence I shall forever be grateful. You gave me a total of almost four times the vote ever received by any previous candidate for mayor in a general election in Atlanta and for this I say:

THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Atlanta, from the bottom of my heart.

WHEN THE VOTES

were counted, 47 of the 70 precincts (two thirds of the precincts) gave me a grand total of 19,377 votes and my opponents only 15,162. It was amazing that I would receive over 24,000 votes when not one of my opponents received as many as 2,000 votes.

I RAN AGAINST

seventeen aldermen, six members of the board of education, the city executive committee, two newspapers, large numbers of poll workers who had to pledge their support to my opponent, over three hundred voting machines that instructed the voters to vote first for my opponent and after they had so voted, other instructions said if they wanted to vote for me they would first have to cancel their vote for my opponent. (Boy, that was rotten!) Also my opposition included all the vice, crime and corruption in Atlanta and one mayor.

WITH ALL

this opposition I was given 24,000 votes while my opponents received approximately 25,000 bloc votes and about 17,000 other votes. Many good people have told me they did not vote for me because I was a candidate in the general election. I appreciate their frankness and their voting in what they believe in—that is what is important—that people vote and vote as they please. I always answer my customers who say they voted for my opponent with the remark that I don't think they were so wise about their politics, but they are the smartest people in town when it comes to picking out a good place to eat.

BUT PLEASE, FOLKS,

don't let the white integrationists who are obligated to the bloc vote come into your school and church meetings and whitewash your minds into believing we must have integration in our schools. They know, but never tell you, that integration of the white and Negro children in our schools will bring harm to both the white and Negro races. It will bring about amalgamation of the races, destroy the purity and character of tens of thousands of our children, ruin the education of many children and soon we would be like the model city of Washington, D. C., where crime and wickedness is taking over the city, its schools and the people are afraid to leave their homes at night.

SO PLEASE,

fellow Georgians, do not let these greedy politicians have your souls and the souls of our children, just because they are obligated for their own souls.

THE TIME

is here—there is no middle ground—we must choose sides. The question is: "Shall we keep our schools segregated, our races pure, peace and harmony in our schools and our state, and protect our children as our forefathers fought for us—or will we give it all up, throw our children to the wolves (polticians) and let those who are most dear to us come face to face with the diseases, crimes and wickedness that has come to all large integrated cities?"

WHAT ABOUT IT MOTHER — FATHER?

Where do you stand? Surely not in the middle. Please let me know, as it would help very much to hear from you.

AND FOR WONDERFUL

School Tax Plea Rebuffed by Court

Efforts of Savannah and Chatham County school boards to force the county tax commissioner to raise property assessments were rebuffed by the Georgia Supreme Court Friday.

The ruling did not close the door on future attempts to raise Chatham County assessments, however.

Property in in the county is presently returned at 25 per per cent of market value. School officials had sought to require Tax Commissioner J. Archie Johnson to raise that to 100 per cent to provide a larger tax base for schools.

(Voters earlier had turned down a referendum to raise school tax millage.)

But the Supreme Court, in a unanimous decision written by Justice T. Grady Head, upheld Chatham Judge Dunbar Harrison's ruling that tax books had been closed for the year 1958 by the time the school officials' action was taken.

3 Are Killed In Smashup At Dudley

Constitution State News Service

DUDLEY—Three persons were killed late Friday in the head-on crash of two automobiles, the State Patrol said. Victims included the drivers of both cars.

The dead were identified as Oscar Eugene Marin, 59, and a passenger in the Marin auto, Mrs. Francis R. Foss, 49, both of Savannah, and Raymond P. Cofer, 32, of Macon.

Investigating officers said Cofer was attempting to pass another auto and crashed head-on into the car driven by Marin.

Both autos were demolished, the patrol said.

The wreck occurred at 5:35 p.m. two miles west of Dudley on U.S. Highway 80.

Swank Motel Here Holding Open House

The Atlanta Cabana, dazzling new luxury motel on Peachtree Street, had its formal opening here Friday and will be available for public tours throughout the weekend.

More than 2,000 curious Atlantans—in addition to invited guests—thronged to "go through" the new facility Friday.

They found a combination of traditional motel features and luxury trademarks usually reserved for the finest hotels. Designers call the Atlanta showplace "a marriage of the hotel and motel."

International flavor of the lodgings begin with an original lobby mural by Atlanta artists Constantin and Roman Chatov. A row of marble statuary imported from Carrara, Italy, reflects pools in the formal garden. Rooms are designed and furnished in French provincial and "modern Mandarin" motifs. Lacy concrete grille work infuses a Moorish influence, while a "gaucho room" designed for meetings takes visitors south of the border.

The 201 rooms have daily rates ranging from $10 to $12 single, $13 to $16 double. Triple-decked parking facilities will take care of about 200 cars.

J. J. Sarno and Stanley Mallin are owners and operators of the Atlanta Cabana. Carl E. Jones is manager. Melvin Crossman of Miami Beach was the architect, with interiors designed by Mrs. Jo Harris and Sarno.

Harold Martin Writes About Circuit Rider

Harold Martin, Atlanta Constitution columnist and associate editor of the Saturday Evening Post, writes of a Candler School of Theology graduate who "works in God's back pastures" in the Dec. 13 issue of the Post.

Martin tells of the personality and work of a modern circuit rider, the Rev. Sam Varnell of Piney Flats, Tenn.

Dr. James W. Sells of Atlanta, executive secretary of the Southeastern Jurisdictional Council, termed Martin's story "the best recognition that has come to the work of Methodist preachers serving the rural South in recent years."

The story is illustrated with nine color photographs.

Jetliner Flies N.Y. to Miami At 600 m.p.h.

MIAMI (UPI)—A giant Boeing 707 spanned the 1,100 air miles between New York and Miami in 2 hours and 28 minutes against strong headwinds Friday in the first commercial all-jet plane flight within U.S. borders.

Head winds up to 80 miles per hour and rainy cold weather over the New York Airport made the flight last 13 minutes more than the 135 minutes scheduled for the trip to Miami. But the plane bored through the adverse conditions at speeds up to 600 miles per hour.

All 7 Caught After Escape At Quitman

CAIRO, Ga. (UPI) — Willie J. Thomas, 34, a Negro who fled a Quitman prison camp, was jailed here Friday on a charge of auto theft.

Grady County Sheriff L. S. Strickland returned Thomas here from Newton, Ala., where he was caught late Thursday.

Police Chief Gerald Thompson of the Dale County, Ala., town reported that Thomas was on his way to Birmingham where his mother and sister lived.

Thompson said the Negro fled the Brooks Prison Camp Thursday with six other convicts. They overpowered a guard and took his gun. The other six were recaptured shortly after the escape, with the gun.

Thompson said he asked Thomas why he hadn't headed for Florida when he was so close at Cairo.

He said Thomas replied, "I don't know. I will next time."

Explosion Shatters Outside Phone Here

An explosion late Friday shattered a telephone in an outside booth at Delaware and Woodland avenues, SE.

Detectives R. E. Finley and R. H. Sumpter said the blast evidently was set off by pouring powder into the pay telephone and inserting a fuse. They said the phone was ripped off the stand, but the coin box was intact.

Caught by Drive Shaft, Austell Mechanic Dies

MACON, Ga. (UPI)—An Austell mechanic died in a freak accident here early Friday while working in the motor compartment of a bus at the Greyhound Lines station.

Bibb Coroner Lester H. Chapman said Erwin E. McKay, 44, an employe of the bus company, died of a heart attack after his jacket was caught and wound tightly around the drive shaft of the air conditioning unit in the bus.

Police said McKay arrived here about 3:45 a.m. from Atlanta to work on the bus motor which would not cut off.

They said Greyhound driver W. D. Commander told them he saw the mechanic lying with his feet and legs outside the motor compartment when he drove into the station at 6:05 a.m. on a run from Jacksonville, Fla. He said McKay appeared to be working on the motor.

About 45 minutes later, McKay was seen in the same position by a porter, Leroy Childs, who said he also thought the mechanic was working on the motor.

But when childs noticed him still in the same position later, he investigated and found McKay was dead.

Officers said McKay's head and one of his arms had been pulled tightly against the drive shaft when his jacket was caught and wound up.

Emory Singers Give Christmas Carol Program

The 90-voice Emory University Glee Club filled Glenn Memorial Auditorium with the Yuletide spirit Friday night, singing beautifully through a program of 13 Christmas carols.

The occasion was the 33rd annual Christmas carol candlelight service staged by the Emory singers. It was based on the ancient Christmas program presented each year at the King's College Chapel at Cambridge University, England.

The 13 carols by the glee club were intertwined with a series of nine Christmas season messages that were read by George Page, a fromer Emory student now a WSB-TV announcer.

The program, under the direction of Edward Kane, director of choral music at Emory, was offered for the Emory faculty and students. The same program at 5 p.m. Sunday will be open to the public and will be telecast over WSB-TV.

Piano accompanists for the glee club were Carroll Tuten and David Byer. The organist was John S. Austin Jr.

Audit Shows State On Fiscal Spree

Climbing expenditures and declining integrity in state government are mirrored in recently completed audits of several departments.

Substantially higher operational costs are listed for agency after agency despite all the talk about "hold the line." That oft-mouthed slogan turned out, as expected, to be hogwash.

Revenue came in at a record rate and was spent with reckless abandon in numerous instances. "Just shake the money tree and let's have a ball" seems to be the attitude.

In such an atmosphere morality crumbled alarmingly.

A former part-time bookkeeper in the State Geology Department has admitted a long series of check forgeries. The audit shows a shortage in the Warm Springs Memorial Commission account. Fraud is charged in an employe's handling of funds in the parks department. Auditor B. E. Thrasher now has reported another irregularity, this time in—of all places—the crippled children's division of the health department. He said it showed up in the accounts of a clerk and involves forgery of endorsements on checks made to various doctors.

These audit findings covered the smaller agencies of state government. Still to come are reports on the giants such as the highway and revenue departments. In view of charges already made by the Fulton County Grand Jury involving some employes of the revenue department the audit of that agency should be most thorough.

In fact, it would be well to supplement Mr. Thrasher's efficient but small staff or set up a special auditing division in line with a recent Fulton County Grand Jury recommendation in order to conduct a microscopic examination into the sales tax division. It also could dig further into all departments handling large sums of money.

The pattern reflected in many of the audits thus far released is laced with heavy spending and liberally stitched with indications of stealing.

The next administration has its work cut out for it in slamming the brakes on the downhill plunge in which the state has been riding merrily and heading it toward fiscal sanity.

Reds Can Out-Bunyan Paul Bunyan Himself

This is positively the last straw. The Russians have laid claim to "firsts" in the invention of the telephone, electric light, airplane, gasoline engine, and just about everything else that comes under the heading of "Progress."

But when they try to stamp a "Made in Russia" sign upon Paul Bunyan, that's the end.

Gov. Mennen Williams, of Michigan, told the Russian first deputy minister of education, on a tour here, that Paul Bunyan hailed originally from Russia. Alefskei Markuchevich was emphatically in agreement.

The way we heard it, Paul Bunyan, of lumberjack fame, "who dug the Grand Canyon by dragging his pick and brushed his teeth with a pine tree," came from Maine, good ole American territory.

The incident is a real rib-tickler. It's common knowledge everywhere in the world that the Russian Communists always could out-Bunyan Paul Bunyan storytellers when it came down to telling outright unadulterated lies.

Downtown, U.S.A, Takes Critical Look at Itself

Downtown, U.S.A., is experiencing a curious process of beautification. Civic groups, businessmen, city officials and just plain everyday citizens are working industriously to make the beauty of downtown skyscraper-deep.

The flight to suburbia and the phenomenal growth of the shopping centers have caused Downtown, U.S.A., to take a good critical look at itself. What it saw wouldn't win any beauty contests, in most instances.

That is being changed now.

Chicago, the Windy City, and Birmingham, our neighbor to the west, are the latest cities to undertake to transform downtown to make it more livable, more attractive and more lovable.

Chicago has finished a $500,000 lighting system for her famed State street.

Birmingham has a more ambitious program in the works, including new downtown lighting, bus-loading zone beautification, new refuse containers, removal of overhead trolley lines and a new traffic lighting system.

Last year Mayor Hartsfield brightened our town on a cold winter day by placing containers on the street islands. The surprised reaction to this gesture of love for a city is a measure of the paucity of ideas that have existed hithertofore for the enrichment of the downtown core area.

Downtown is a mecca for humanity. If it is to remain a mecca for millions at work and at play, it must, like a peacock, become more conscious of its appearance and really show its stuff.

Flight Engineers Are Wrong on Qualifications

Some progress is reported in negotiations between Eastern Air Lines and their machinists. We hope it will continue and result in agreement to end their dispute.

Eastern also has a strike on its hands by the flight engineers. In this one public opinion is increasingly with the company. A major issue is whether engineers should know how to pilot the ships. The company maintains that with the huge jets soon to appear on the lines the engineers also should be able to take over the controls in an emergency.

This qualification, recommended by the federal authorities, is in the interest of safety. A federal judge has ruled correctly that, of course, the company can establish job qualifications.

It seems to us desirable and necessary that engineers also be pilots. The big piston-engine craft are fast enough. The jets will be even faster. Any trouble will require instant and cooperative action. We believe the public agrees that this requirement is desirable.

Meanwhile, the airline people—labor and management—should realize the importance of airlines as passenger carriers. The public wants a dependable system. The great attraction of air travel as compared to railroads has been its speed, its safety and its availability. A loss of good will through long labor disputes is harmful to the industry.

Reservists, CD Take Spotlight Tomorrow

Tomorrow is the anniversary of the Pearl Harbor debacle and the occasion is being observed around the country with appropriate remembrances.

For one thing, it has been designated as Civil Defense Day. Citizens will be reminded all over the nation of the work which is being done to insure their survival in case of attack. At the same time, they will be warned of their own responsibilities for their own and their neighbors' safety.

The week also marks the tenth anniversary of Continental Air Command, the organization which has charge of all Air Force Reserve training in the nation. CONAC, as it is familiarly known to reservists, consists of three numbered Air Forces which administer the reserve program, including the Air National Guard.

CONAC as such was nonexistent at the time of the Pearl Harbor disaster in 1941. In fact, the Air Force itself was almost so. The disastrous defeat—perhaps the worst in the nation's history—called our attention forcefully to the great role of airpower in modern war.

Today the Air Force Reserve, administered through CONAC, consists of approximately 490,000 men. The Air National Guard has 70,000 members. Had it not been for the reserve program, the story of the Korean War might have been vastly different.

In Georgia the command is represented by the Fourteenth "Flying Tiger" Air Force based at Warner Robins. It administers the program in this state and throughout the entire Eastern section of the nation. Its members form a vital part of the nation's deterrent strength, with thousands ready for instant recall. CONAC and all its units, including several thousand dedicated Georgians, rate a salute from all of us on this occasion.

This Really Happened In the 20th Century

Once upon a time there was a boy in New York who reached the ninth grade without learning to read or write. This boy, a teen-ager, got into a lot of trouble with the police for stealing automobiles.

When the boy came before the judge for sentencing, the judge gave him an "indefinite term up to five years" to learn to read and write.

In commenting on the case, the judge said:

"It's a shocking situation when a judge is asked by a defendant's lawyer to send a youth to jail so that he can learn to read and write. . . ."

This is a story that is almost unbelievable, but it is true.

When a boy can pass eight grades in school without learning to read or write, there's a cog loose in our educational machinery.

It makes one wonder what kind of teachers he had. Has passing a grade in some schools become so simple and so automatic a process that it isn't necessary to learn to read or to write?

Minister Says Closed Schools Would Be Greatest Evil That Could Befall Georgia

Atlanta—Ministers and newspapermen are well-read, intelligent men who are concerned about public affairs and are not concerned about getting votes. When they agree on a subject, it would be wise for people to give serious consideration to their opinion. I wonder what other groups, such as physicians, lawyers who are not seeking political office, teachers, and the like, might have to say on the school situation: No doubt they would say much the same as the ministers and newspapermen say.

As one of the men who signed the Manifesto, I would say that I do not want any integration at all in the schools until the people as a whole want it, for I think integration against the will of those who are being integrated is a great evil that would result in a great deal of harm.

But to close the public schools would result in even greater evil: no education for some children; inferior education for others; good education only for those whose parents can afford it; tremendous opportunities for graft and corruption in disposing of school properties and handling educational allowances, and many other disorders. This would be a greater evil than yielding just enough and having just enough integration to keep the public schools open.

REV. ROY PETTWAY,
The Church of Our Saviour.

Decatur — I believe every citizen who is Southern in belief as well as by the map should be willing to make every sacrifice and exert every effort short of war to save what little we have left of constitutional government. If we throw in the towel now, as some ministers would have us do, it will mean the last stronghold of organized opposition to centralism or statism in this land has fallen.

JOHN E. VERNER.

Atlanta — Sen. Russell, in his interview last week, gave the Negro credit for being saner than we.

"I don't think the colored people would be willing to deny their children education for 20 years," he said, insinuating that they would submit to segregation rather than have the public schools remain closed. Yet we are asked to close our schools in the face of integration for an indefinite period of time ending only Heaven knows when, denying great segments of our school population the right to any education at all.

Another irony of this tragic situation is that we, the people of Georgia, are told that we must not obey the federal law in this case, and yet we must obey the state law calling for closure of the public schools. Why obey the state law? Or any law, for that matter, if the very backbone of our nation is to be flouted?

Just how mixed up can our politicians get?

MRS. DIXON PRESTON.

Decatur — I wish to commend your newspaper and Ralph McGill for the splendid leadership you are giving to the people of Georgia in the discussion of the public school situation with reference to the segregation-desegregation problem. It is inconceivable to me that any thinking person would for a moment suggest that the education of our children should be sacrificed for the maintenance of segregation.

It would, indeed, be a sad state of affairs for the State of Georgia if a generation of young people should grow up untrained in the skills and wisdom and knowledge essential in the rapidly changing world of science, industry and invention.

We can do no greater disservice to our children than to deprive them of their education and offer in its stead the doubtful philosophy of maintenance of segregation at any price.

MRS. CARL C. PFEIFFER.

Hapeville — This letter concerns our problem of public schools—whether they shall be integrated or closed. Your editorials on this subject are a great service to the South and to the country.

First, let me say that I am a white Southerner from birth and I have lived all of my life in the Southern tradition of white supremacy. Nevertheless, I am at a loss to see how racial prejudice can be justified by people who are upstanding and honorable citizens.

Be that as it may, however, I feel very strongly that the state will be doing a great injustice to those of us with children of school age if the schools are closed without the privilege of local option. Please let me thank you for your courageous stand and request most sincerely that you continue to support the public schools of Georgia.

F. W. W.

Cordele — Before the Supreme Court passed the ruling on segregation in 1954, I don't remember any of the ministers in Georgia or in the nation ever having said anything about segregation. Now the ministers are hiding behind the coattails of Earl Warren while he is taking on-the-job training as a Supreme Court chief justice.

Why don't the ministers stand up and be counted individually?

ERNEST LEE.

West Point—It is with much gratification that I have carefully read Alabama's pupil placement law. I note that our governor-elect does not think the Supreme Court's approval of this law especially encouraging to other states. I hope a second reading of the law will convince him of its desirability.

Would it not be well for all states to pass such a law?

EVANS HARRELL.

Atlanta—I was born and raised in the South. My great-grandfather fought for the Confederacy during the War Between the States and was killed in that conflict. But that was three generations ago—so let it be.

This is the 20th century but we are still shackled with some politicians who prefer to live in the past. They would rather see our children uneducated and keep a people subdued than admit that we lost the war.

Yes, we put them in office, but there is a very good excuse for many of us. We seldom have a real choice. We can only vote for what we hope is the lesser of the evils.

ATLANTAN.

Rome — With respect to the laws of God and man, any thinking person, Negro or white, will fight school integration with all resources. If the courts of our land force us to close public schools, it does not mean an end to education. We are sure to lose some ground at first, but the people of the South will work out the plans and provide means to educate our children. The loss we suffer will be a cheap price to pay for maintaining the decency and respect of our children.

ROBERT L. GARNER.

Rome — Forty years ago, promoted by the ministerial profession, a noble experiment was voted into our Constitution. Liquor was outlawed.

The object was laudable but it was not practicable. The result was a vast increase in crime, disrespect for law and alcoholism, particularly among the young. It could not work.

Now the Atlanta ministers advocate a similar situation. Their stand is largely emotional and not reasonable. They should know full well that if accomplished it would result in lawlessness and irreparable damage to our system of education.

Society cannot be compelled.

W. H. LEWIS.

Stocking Drive Is Partnership

A farm couple along in years was blessed with the birth of a son. They were prouder than a rooster on "coming out" day at the hatchery. But to their dismay the boy did not talk. Not the first year, nor the second year. Nor even when he was 12 years old. Nary a word did he utter

Then one day the son sat on the top rail of a fence watching the old man turn a furrow in the field.

The boy looked around and saw that the bull, a real mean critter, had broken out of the pasture and was charging across the plowed ground.

The boy yelled, "The bull, Pa! The bull."

The father did a sidestep that would have been a credit to a toreador and beat it for safety with his son on yon side of the fence.

As soon as he had recovered his equilibrium, he realized a miracle had happened.

The father looked at the boy and said, "You spoke, son, you spoke! Why ain't you ever spoke before?"

"Shucks, Pa," the son said. "I ain't ever had anything important to say."

That's a sample. It's a joke you'll find in tomorrow's Empty Stocking Edition of The Atlanta Journal-Constitution. I know it's in there. I put it there, along with another'n or two.

The Empty Stocking Edition has something important to say—and to do.

What it must do is provide funds to fill a lot of stockings that otherwise would be empty Christmas morning.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce is partner with the newspapers in the project.

You are a partner, too.

Your share is in giving, in buying a special edition and paying generously for it.

I heard a fellow say the other day, "Policies motivated by greed wind up in poverty."

On the other hand, policies motivated by another's need can wind up in immeasurable (and untaxable) riches.

Let your standard of giving match your standard of living.

PORRIDGE PROPELLED: Problems propagated by jet propulsion are varied. For instance, a jetliner leaves Rome at 8 a.m. Rome time. The hostess serves breakfast. The plane arrives in New York at 8 a.m., or near that, New York time. It flies six hours more westward and it is breakfast time again.

Breakfast, lunch and dinner? Or breakfast three times?

By jet you can go around the world on oatmeal.

There's a Remedy For Empty Feeling

"I feel empty inside," the man was saying. He is a man who has achieved distinction in his field of work, is wealthy, successful and respected. He can be counted on to support the various good causes of the community and is a tireless worker in many projects. He not only attends church regularly, he is faithful to the jobs his church has asked him to do.

Yet he says, "I feel empty inside." That reminded me of a statement the well-known psychiatrist, Dr. Rollo May, made in his book, "Man's Search for Himself."

He said: "It may sound surprising when I say, on the basis of my own clinical practice as well as that of my psychological and psychiatric colleagues, that the chief problem of people today is emptiness. By that I mean not only that many people do not know what they want; they often do not have a clear idea what they feel . . . thus they feel swayed this way and that, with painful feelings of powerlessness, because they feel vacuous, empty."

Many people today are like the little girl who stirred and stirred her tea. Finally she went crying to her mother because the tea would not get sweet. The mother pointed out to her that no amount of stirring would sweeten the tea until first she put some sugar in it. And all of our ceaseless activities fail to satisfy when we forget to put into our minds and hearts the food they demand.

Nothing fills our emptiness like the satisfaction of a great belief. Dr. Daniel A. Poling has a practice which I have tried and recommend. When he first awakens in the morning, before he gets up, before he says his morning prayer, before he allows any other thoughts to come into his mind, he says, "I believe, I believe, I believe."

After he gets his mind set in his first waking moments, he begins naming over some beliefs. He will name such things as he believes there is a God who made this world, who made him, who is concerned about what happens. He believes God gave him this new day to live and he is thankful for it.

He believes he will find something useful to do today. He believes in his wife and his children. He believes in his friends. He believes he will be happy today. Another morning he may name other beliefs.

That night after he has gone to bed he has a few moments of retrospection before going to sleep. He looks back over the day and thinks how his beliefs of the morning have held true during the day. He thinks of new insights he has gained that day. He thanks God. He drifts off to sleep believing that the God who holds the planets on their courses also will hold him during the night.

Such a course leads one to say with the Psalmist, "In thy presence is fullness of joy" (16:11).

President Mateos Breaks Precedent

MEXICO CITY—The inside story of Sen. Lyndon Johnson's "undiplomatic" and highly useful visit to President Adolfo Lopez Mateos throws a good deal of light on the manner of man who became this nation's powerful chief executive this week. I have described President Lopez Mateos as a venturesome political leader not easily hemmed in by precedent.

He was not hemmed in by precedent in reaching out even before taking office to extend an invitation for a personal conference with the chief legislative figure of the opposition party in Washington whose job is not to conduct foreign policy.

The origin of the Johnson visit goes back to the Mexican election of last July. With the Senate majority leader at his ranch in Texas and with Senor Lopez Mateos about to go electioneering to northern Mexico, it struck the president-to-be that this would be a fine time for Sen. Johnson to step across the border for a personal get-together. It was soon evident to both sides that such a meeting in the midst of the campaign would be distorted as American interference in Mexican politics. The visit was postponed.

But Senor Lopez Mateos did not drop the idea. Immediately after his election he issued a personal invitation to Johnson who was willing to accept if Secretary Dulles and President Eisenhower wanted him to. The U.S. ambassador to Mexico, Robert C. Hill, strongly recommended that Johnson be urged to accept. Dulles and Eisenhower were wholly agreeable. It looked like good diplomacy and it was certainly good domestic politics for the President to enlist the services of the Democratic leader of the newly strengthened Democratic Senate majority.

The meeting at Acapulco came off superbly. Senor Lopez Mateos liked it. Johnson liked it and the Mexican people and the Mexican press gave evidence that they liked it. The President's own private word to friends here was that he was "absolutely enchanted."

Sen. Johnson established a close, cordial friendship of mutual trust with Mexico's new President.

Senor Lopez Mateos found in Johnson an understanding ear which made a good impression on one who does not know many political leaders in the United States.

Senor Lopez Mateos asked for nothing. Sen. Johnson promised nothing—but equality of friendliness and understanding.

This "undiplomatic," diplomatically successful meeting helps to begin our relations with the new government of Mexico on a more friendly basis.

If the United States is to exert any constructive influence, this must rest upon our recognition of Mexico's sovereign control of its own affairs and our influence will be nil if it goes beyond friendly, unostentatious advice among trusted equals.

Sen. Johnson has helped to set the stage for that kind of relationship and U.S. Ambassador Hill is one who can ably function within that framework.

It's Houdini Week For the Taxpayers

The past seven days or so may go down in Georgia history as Houdini Week—man, money and machinery disappeared, all amidst circumstances mysterious and baffling. Unlike the affairs arranged by the late great magician, however, there was no mere waving of a wand to bring things back. A lawman did wave a gun out in Texas to restore the missing man, one Spence Edwards, but it seems reappearance of the cash and machinery will require legerdemain of a more involved nature.

Houdini Week opened with the flight of policeman-killer Edwards from a Whitfield County work gang. Edwards departed the state's custody while in the care of an unarmed guard, a paroled convict himself. Subsequent inquiry into this act of magic revealed Edwards had been transferred to Whitfield County at the request of an "aunt" who lived in Tennessee nearby for visiting purposes. After even more subsequent investigations this "aunt" turned out—presto—to be Edwards' sweetheart. Ah, what sweet magic.

The state took an unenthusiastic view of this business and summoned county and work camp officials to Atlanta to run through the happening slowly. Warden Fred Goble was censured for being "grossly negligent and extremely lax." And it came out that Edwards really wasn't himself at the escape. Goble said he didn't think the prisoner would have fled "if he hadn't got to drinking." Edwards, presumably sober by then, was recaptured a week later in Texas. But if it had not been for that drinking . . . a fellow in the jug and a jug in him.

Two bulldozers comprised the unlikely ingredients in the missing machinery case. Losing them seems comparable to misplacing a haystack in a phone booth. The dozers, worth about $25,000, disappeared from the state prison branch in Telfair County. Too big to be up anybody's sleeve, the machinery was the object of a far-flung search. Anyone seeing two suspicious-acting bulldozers are requested to notify the state.

The big money disappearance act was announced with considerable awe by State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. It seems when his audit got down to rock bottom, the State Geology Department was short $50,200. A part-time bookkeeper was nominated as the magician in the case. This "ledgerdemain" expert made only $1,680 a year, but he allegedly made $155,700 disappear, having paid back all but $50,200. Total yearly salaries in the Geology Division of the State's Magician League amount to only $57,000. Making rabbits disappear is child's play compared to deduction of $50,200 from $57,000.

And that's how things went during Houdini Week.

State Rests Case In Temple Blast

Cell Mate Says Bright Told Of Serving as a Lookout of the Columbian movement here.

Branham—whom the state has identified as a "co-conspirator," pointed out Atlanta was the birthplace of the Thunderbolt symbol used by both the party and the Columbians. It also declared:

"This reason alone makes it necessary for us to make a stand in Atlanta."

TRIAL OF COLUMBIAN

Referring to the trial of Columbians leader Emory Burke here, Dr. Fields also declared in the letter:

"The first thing the NSRP in Atlanta should do, in speeches and literature, is reopen the Emory Burke frameup trial and demand the impeachment of (Sol. Gen.) Paul Webb and Mayor Hartsfield and all the other slimy politicians who aided in the bringing of witnesses against Burke."

The letter said Fields felt the party should "make a tremendous fight in Atlanta."

Cole, who said he was a "figurehead" in leading the party, said he did not agree with some of the statements in the letter. "I don't agree with everything Dr. Fields put out," he said.

Cole, an insurance man from LaFollette, Tenn., said under cross-examination that he has "been just as active as I could be in regard to segregation." In regard to questions about his feelings toward Jews, he said he has some "awful good Jewish friends."

JUDGE PYE

Trial of the case will resume Saturday in Superior Court before Judge Durwood T. Pye.

The state rested its case directly after testimony from Bright's former cell mate had directly tied him in with the dynamiting, and after Judge Pye had ruled out of evidence testimony about a lie detector test Bright had been given at his request.

DETAILS OF BOMBING

The former cell mate testified at length about details of the bombing which he said Bright told him while imprisoned with him in the Fulton County jail after his arrest in connection with the Oct. 12 bombing.

DeVore, who himself was being held on larceny after trust charges which were dismissed, said Bright told him he was the "leader" of the bombing group and that he drew the plans for it.

"He told me that he was there in that he drew the plans and led it . . . He told me that he didn't do the actual bombing . . . that he rode as a lookout," DeVore related.

GETAWAY CARS

The witness said Bright told him that three getaway cars were parked on Spring street facing Peachtree, and that another was parked on a ramp leading into the North Expressway. He said Bright told him it was jacked up as if it had a flat tire to "keep people from asking questions."

DeVore related that Bright told him that prior to the bombing, he had been picked up from an all-night drugstore on Ponce de Leon Ave., NE, by Wallace Allen, a co-defendant, and others, and carried "out on Spring street."

After the bombing, DeVore said Bright told him, Bright left and went back out on Ponce de Leon "and had a steak."

Under intensive cross-examination from defense attorney James R. Venable, DeVore said Bright's remarks were heard by "34 men in the cell" who would "tell you the same thing." He named several of them.

DeVore said Bright told him he had met Richard Bolling in Fulton County Jail when he was arrested on a picketing charge. He said Bright told him he had made a trip to Decatur with Venable, Bright's attorney, and paid off a bad check to get Bolling out of jail.

DeVore said this payment of the check, according to Bright, was to be "a partial payment" for Richard Bolling's "participation in the bombing." He said Bright told him "the balance of it was to come later."

The witness said Bright related how he drew the plans for the actual placing of the dynamite, and how he had told of worrying that police, who seized his car, might have found in it some "powder dust" and plywood.

REWARD MONEY

When the defense accused him of attempting to turn Bright in for reward money, DeVore said he had once defended Bright in jail from other prisoners. He said the prisoners "cut his T-shirt up with a razor blade" because "they was all mad at him—they called him 'the bomber.'"

Under further defense examination, DeVore repeated that Bright told him "he was the leader . . . that he did not place the bomb himself . . . that Richard Bolling did."

First defense witness was Patrolman Paul Green, who said he saw Bright at the all-night drugstore up until 2 a.m. Oct. 12. Essentially the same testimony came from Miss Ann Blackwell, cashier at the store. She said Bright, in company with a woman, left about 2:30 a.m.

TWO ATTENDANTS

The defense also used two service station attendants from the station directly across from the Temple, James T. Hopkins and John R. Brooks, the attendants, told of a light-skinned Negro coming into the station the morning before the bombing and asking the synagogue's location.

Another defense witness, T. L. Williams, operator of a Chamblee curb market, told of seeing Bright and a woman in his store but he could not recall when it was.

The state extensively cross-examined another out-of-town defense witness, David Baird, 23, of LaFollette, Tenn., who said he came to Atlanta on his own expense after hearing that Rogers, the undercover FBI employe, was to be a part in the trial.

IN TENNESSEE

The defense put Baird up to disprove Rogers' testimony that anti-Jewish statements he related from the witness stand came from persons he met in Tennessee, and not from himself. Both Baird and Cole testified Rogers was vociferous in his anti-Jewish comments.

Baird, under cross-examination, said he could not recall how he heard "about three weeks" ago that Rogers—whose connection with the case has been kept secret by police—was to be a witness in the case.

Also used by the defense was Mrs. Allen Bright, sister-in-law of the defendant, who said Bright was at home until after midnight, Oct. 12, but that he left home sometime after midnight.

Rogers also testified Thursday that Bright said he telephoned Ralph McGill, editor of The Atlanta Constitution, "called him a dirty rat and hung up."

Rogers said that anti-Semites boasted of having a sympathiser named Emmett Morris working in the composing room of The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

and by the superintendent of the receiving camp.

That is how the pump was "found." Forrester said he believes the new system is air-tight "unless someone just plain steals equipment."

Forrester said he did not know how the pump got from Jesup to Leesburg without being reported. The transfer occurred before the new inventory system was put into effect, however.

A road scraper was discovered to be missing from the Wayne Branch at the same time as the pump but has since been found. The state has billed contractor Ted Odum for rent on the machine.

That leaves the department with only two pieces of equipment missing: two tractors last listed at the Telfair branch.

Princess Anne Studies Ballet

LONDON (UPI)—Princess Anne, 8, is taking ballet lessons, Buckingham Palace announced Friday.

Her interest was aroused three weeks ago when she wheedled Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret into taking her to see her first ballet performance.

Propped up on two cushions in the Coliseum Theater, Anne was entranced by the dances of Dame Margot Fonteyn and other internationally known ballerinas.

Downed U.S. Army Flier Held by East Germans

Brandt said he told the Chancellor his administration will give a clear "no" to Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's proposal to make West Berlin a neutral, free city.

BONN PARLEY

In Bonn, political officers from the U.S., British and French embassies met with officials of the West German Foreign Office.

The capture of Mackin came at a time when the East Germans already were talking tough about their air space and declaring Western commercial airlines had no right to use it on flights to Berlin.

Rumors floated around Berlin that two U.S. airliners were buzzed during the day by Communist jet fighters, but Western officials and airline spokesmen denied the reports.

The East German radio said Mackin flew over the border without permission and parachuted out, and the plane was destroyed on hitting the ground.

PILOT UNHURT

"Youthful bystanders apprehended him and turned him over to the German border police," the broadcast said. "The pilot is uninjured."

An East German official reached by telephone at the border town of Sonneberg, was the first to confirm the capture of the 27-year-old pilot.

The official was told that the United States had asked Soviet army headquarters in East Berlin about Mackin.

"The Soviet Union has nothing to do with the case," he snapped. "We are a sovereign nation and the Americans will have to talk to us about the pilot."

U.S. officials immediately emphasized that the State Department would refuse to negotiate with the East Germans.

The Soviet Union is trying to force Western recognition of East Germany by ending the four-power occupation of Berlin and transferring to the East Germans control over Allied air and land lifelines to West Berlin within six months.

Pioneer III Is Pointed Past Moon

the rocket by a confident Army crew came exactly one year after U.S. missile prestige fell to its lowest ebb with the explosion of the first Vanguard satellite rocket.

RADIATION PROBER

If the launching rocket did its job, scientists hoped to gather more vital information about an intense field of radiation above the earth and to see just how far their space probe could go.

The 60-ton rocket was composed of a modified Jupiter intermediate range ballistic missile (IRBM) as the booster stage, topped by three stages of solid fuel Sergeant rockets.

The upper stages were practically identical to those used in the Jupiter-C rockets that hurled three Explorer earth satellites into orbit.

FIRST STAGE

The missile was in sight for more than three minutes before it suddenly puffed out of sight. This apparently was burn out of the first-stage Jupiter engine.

The rocket climbed on 150,000 pounds of thrust generated by the Jupiter's liquid-fuel engine.

The launching came right at the time prescribed after a lengthy countdown. It appeared to be perfect to more than 120 newsmen observing the shoot from a tower some two miles from the launching site.

Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris, chief of the Army's Missile Ordnance command, viewed the blast-off from the blockhouse nearby.

In effect, the Army missile men aimed Pioneer III directly at the moon but because of the uncontrollable errors involved in celestial mechanics the chances of hitting were slight.

CROSS PATHS

If all went well, the probe would cross the path of the moon, more than 220,000 miles away, after a flight of 33 hours, 45 minutes.

Then it was supposed to shoot on to more than 400,000 miles away where, the Army hoped, it would go into a distant orbit around the sun. The sun itself is 93 million miles away. This would make Pioneer III the first man-made planet.

The launching came in the wake of three Air Force attempts to orbit the moon without success. Pioneer I came closest Oct. 11 when it penetrated 79,000 miles into space.

Abandon Ship: the Indianapolis

Sun, Oil, Wounds Took a Heavy Toll

other flotsam to which men were clinging. In his force was Clarence Benton, CFC, of Cloudcroft, N.M., whose courage would win him the Navy and Marine Corps Medal.

YOUNG OFFICER

Capping the triangle formed by the groups were Capt. Charles McVay's enclave of three rafts and nine men, and the four rafts and 19 men that had fallen to the command of Ensign Ross Rogers of Garden City, N.Y., who had been to sea only two weeks. He had been aboard so briefly that he still didn't know his duties as a junior officer of Turret IV.

Rogers was one of the last to leave the ship, and when he hit the water he sank deep beneath the surface. As he came up, a raft was right in front of him. Rogers climbed into the raft and found Willie Hatfield, Seaman 2.C., from Salt Lick, Ky., and Chief Machinist's Mate Albert Ferguson of Couer d'Alene, Idaho, who was suffering from leg wounds. Rogers worked throughout the night applying and releasing tourniquet pressure in an endeavor to reduce the loss of blood until Ferguson got medical attention.

Rogers reasoned that the ship would be missed Tuesday morning, when it failed to show up off Leyte. Search would start immediately and they should be found by Wednesday morning. He figured Ferguson could last that long.

DRIFT APART

When daylight disclosed three other rafts nearby with men on them, Rogers ordered them brought together, but the constant bumping jarred Ferguson's leg painfully, and Rogers decided to cut loose from the others. The rafts drifted slowly apart, but remained in sight of each other until the end of the ordeal.

During Sunday night, the men on Capt. Charles McVay's raft became scavengers, snatching from the sea any interesting looking objects they passed. On Monday the captain took stock of all the possessions. His wristwatch was working fine, and he started to keep a log, using paper and a pencil stub gathered from various pockets and wallets. The sun gave an approximate position, and a fish line streaming in the water indicated drift. The inventory showed they had 10 12-ounce cans of Spam, two large tins of malted-milk tablets, 17 cans of biscuits, but no fresh water. At least the food would be ample for some days to come.

CIGARETTES, NO MATCHES

Gear was retrieved from the underside of the overturned rafts, and one carton yielded 50 small packages of cigarettes. But there wasn't a lighter in the crowd, and the matches from the emergency kits were soaked. Cigarettes and no way to light them! They cast the cigarettes back into the water.

On Monday planes did appear—A twin-engine bomber which passed directly over them and, a few hours later, a B24 or B29 away off to the south. Both planes, flying high and not looking for men in the water, flew right on by.

Twice during Monday night the men on the rafts spotted airplane running lights or heard the sounds of engines. The signal flares they set off fluttered out without a response.

There was little talk among the men in the water, but a question often asked was whether a distress message got off the ship, and how soon rescue would come. Officers, who knew nothing about it, assured the men around them that the distress message had gotten away. They added that regardless of whether the message was heard, the ship would soon be missed and planes and vessels would come looking for them, the officers said. Everyone wanted to believe that, and if some men had little gnawing doubts, they kept them to themselves.

CRACKED JOKES

As the sun rose high on Monday, the sea flattened out a little and even the men in life jackets felt confident. The kapoks were holding them high, and the worst of the oil bath was over.

"These things'll hold you up at least 48 ours," a few told each other, feeling sure they'd be rescued before then. Some jokes were cracked. Hal Schecterle pulled out his wallet and found a soggy dollar bill in it.

"Beer for the house," he said, and got a laugh.

This mood didn't last long. As the sun rose steadily, eyes began to burn. Soon they were nearly blind — photophobia, worse than snow-blindness, because, even when shut, their eyes glowed like two red balls in their heads.

It was some hours before the men began to realize fully that sharks and other rapacious fish were among them. A man suddenly screamed, his head bobbed for a moment, and he began flailing the water with his arms. Blood welled to the surface, and other men took up the cry. At first they thought only of sharks, but gradually word spread that these warm equatorial waters were also host to barracudas and other carnivorous fish that could not be so easily seen.

Fear spread, and the immense sea grew in breadth and terror.

GROW WEAKER

The injured who survived the first few hours were weakening fast now, with the hot sun, the sea, the oil and their wounds all conspiring to sap their strength. Those who had been spared injury gave unstintingly of their strength, their food, even their life jackets, to help those who could not help themselves. But in most cases it was not enough. By Monday night nearly all of the injured were gone.

One of the last of the injured to go was Cmdr. Lipski, whose grit had kept him alive through long agony with ghastly burns. At last, he gasped out to "Doc" Haynes, "I'm going now, Lew. Tell my wife I love her, and I want her to marry again." They took the life jacket off his body and committed him to the sea.

It seemed at first a relief when the sun went down on Monday, but as darkness settled the wind turned cold. After the blasting heat of the day the effect was devastating. It was black again now, too, and the men were more fully aware of the terrors of the deep.

FEAR OF SEPARATION

There was the paralyzing fear of getting separated from the group, dozing off and waking to find yourself alone in this vast sea. Sleep was more perilous at night. During the day, many of the men had napped briefly, knowing that buddies would waken them if their heads got too near the water. At night, you might slip away or go under and nobody would know it.

Hopes sprang up again with the first streaks of morning light in the sky Tuesday. For surely, they had told themselves Monday, help would come on Tuesday.

No plane passed overhead, and no ship came plowing down on them. The strain began to show. There were quarrels at the rafts and the nets. Men began to bicker about turns on the raft, a fair share of the rations, where there were any. Some men said the officers were hogging the rafts, or hiding food, or eating secretly.

POOR LIFESAVERS

Almost from the first, men began discovering that life jacket design was an art not yet mastered. The rubber life belts were the worst; many refused to inflate. Even if they did, they gave little support when worn around the waist, as intended. They were better than nothing, to be sure, but not much.

The kapok jackets, of the so-called horse-collar type, gave good support, but the collars soon began to rub the men's necks and chins, and salt-water ulcers set in around the skin rubbed raw by the scratchy canvas.

Sores and thirst were now harder to bear than hunger. As the sun rose higher and hotter, some men thought of schemes for making the sea water potable. They talked a little of "straining" the water, or "evaporating" it.

MOST GO INSANE

"Knock it off, it'll still kill you," said the clearheaded around them. But soon men who could stand gnawing thirst no longer took first a little drink, then a bigger one, and a still bigger one.

It is a horrible death, but soon over. During the last paroxysms, friends about them sought either to hold them or to escape from their wild thrashings, until at last the bodies subsided and became still. It was time then to salvage the life jacket and knife, mirror, or any other potentially useful object and let the body sink slowly out of sight.

All the hope Tuesday held died when night fell. This was the night when most of them passed from the world of sanity into the world of fantasy.

Happy Birthday, Sagittarius! The restrictions and somewhat depressing circumstances of the past two years will soon be over, and a new cycle of greater optimism and favorable circumstances will bring opportunities for promotion, publicity, and wider social popularity. Contacts with unusual people in professional fields can bring inspiration and stimulation, especially in June.

Georgia Legislative Leaders Discuss What's Ahead For Us in 1959

The Atlanta Constitution resumes its winter series of the public service television program, Press Gallery, this Sunday at 12:30, WSB-TV, Channel 2.

Sen. Carl Sanders of Augusta, new Senate administration floor leader, and Rep. Frank Twitty of Camilla, House of Representatives floor leader, will discuss some of the issues facing the forthcoming Georgia legislature, expected to be one of the most important in recent state history.

The Legislature's members will be expected to deal with platform pledges of Governor-elect Ernest Vandiver in many fields, such as government reorganization, reforms in budgetary procedures, restoration of General Assembly powers in state spending, agricultural and industrial development, and many others.

Senator Sanders, a member of the Senate Watchdog Committee, headed a committee which investigated rural roads building earlier this year. Representative Twitty has headed a committee which investigated Georgia's insurance laws with a view to their revision at the coming session.

Questioning them will be Constitution associate editor George Boswell and Constitution capital reporter Bruce Galphin. Ralph McGill, Atlanta Constitution editor, will serve as moderator.

No. 77: Know Your County:

Jefferson Davis Captured In Irwin by Union Troops

Irwin County, in south-central Georgia, was created from Creek Indian land in 1818, ranking 45th in order of creation. It was named for Gov. Jared Irwin, who successfully fought the Yazoo Fraud and burned the official papers pertaining to it in front of the State Capitol. Ocilla, incorporated in 1897, is the county seat. The original county seat was Irwinville.

Confederate President Jefferson Davis, en route to Mississippi, was captured by Union soldiers at Irwinville on May 10, 1865. Several Northern soldiers were killed when two Union cavalry troops creeping through the predawn darkness to make the capture, mistook one another for Southern soldiers and opened fire. The site is now a state park, which includes a museum containing relics of the War Between the States.

On July 13, 1836, Georgia militia killed 20 Indians at a battle on the Allapaha River.

Irwin County covers 372 square miles, ranking 68th in size. It has 11,500 residents (1957 estimate), ranking 82nd in population (1950 census). Ocilla has 3,100 residents (1957 estimate). Highways running through the county are U.S. 129 and 319, and Georgia 35, 11, 90, 32, 107 and 125.

There were 1,308 farms, averaging 145 acres, in the county in 1954. About 53 per cent of the farm acreage was in woodland and 35 per cent in harvested cropland. Leading crops are tobacco, corn, peanuts and cotton.

Tomorrow: Jackson County.

U.S. Talent Can Defeat Reds, Counselors Told

By CHARLES MOORE

America, greatly outnumbered by its two principal potential enemies—Russia and Red China—must bring out the best abilities of its citizens, school counselors were told here Friday.

"The whole future of our nation depends upon the ability of the nation to find and develop its human resources to the greatest degree," said Dr. Arthur Hitchcock, executive director of the American Personnel and Guidance Assn., Washington.

Dr. Hitchcock was the main speaker at the opening of the two-day ninth annual convention of the Georgia Assn. of School Counselors Friday at the Piedmont Hotel.

"We must not only have better teachers and a better educational program but better counseling programs," said Dr. Hitchcock.

The goal of a proper guidance program, he continued, is that students when they leave school "know where they're heading and that they are heading in the direction that is best suited to them."

Dr. Hitchcock said qualities for an adequate guidance program include:

An adequate ratio of counselors to pupils. He recommended one counselor per 250 students at high schools.

Counselors of the highest quality.

Counselors spend their time counseling, and not doing unrelated work.

Schools have adequate programs of testing, and good student personnel records.

Welcoming delegates and guests to the Friday session was Paul West, Fulton County superintendent of schools.

Killer Paroled After 3 Years Of Life Term

The State Board of Pardons and Paroles voted 2-1 Friday to parole a slayer who has served less than four years of a life term.

The action was recommended in the case of Spencer Youngblood, 32, by Atlantic Circuit Judge Mel Price, who presided over the prisoner's trial.

Price said in a letter that Youngblood should have been convicted of voluntary manslaughter instead of murder. He noted that Youngblood and others involved in the 1952 Tattnall County slaying were drunk at the time.

Parole Board Chairman Hugh Carney voted against the parole. Members William H. Kimbrough and Mrs. Rebecca Garrett approved it.

Aussies Fly 5 Lockheed Planes Home

A historic mass airlift was begun in Marietta Friday as five Lockheed C130 Hercules took off for Australia, 10,000 miles away.

The five propjet, troop-cargo carriers were carrying 40 members of the Royal Australian Air Force. They are the first of 12 C130s that Australia is obtaining from Lockheed through a purchase agreement with the U.S. Air Force.

Australia is the first foreign nation to purchase the six-mile-a-minute transports.

The planes left Dobbins AFB loaded with 10 tons of spare parts, extra engines and electronic equipment each. First stop will be San Francisco, with refueling stops in Hawaii and the Fiji Islands.

Neighbors Alert 2 Families as Building Burns

Fire which started in a vacant house on Berean avenue, SE, Friday damaged that building and two nearby residences, police said.

Reuben Bedford, of 216½ Berean Ave., said he was leaving for work when he noticed flames spreading through the vacant building at 224 Berean Ave.

Bedford rushed over to 226 Berean Ave., to route out the family of Dewitt Bales. His wife ran to 220 Berean Ave. and awakened the occupant, Mrs. Lucille Hawkins.

Northwest Given Nonstop Milwaukee-Atlanta Flight

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board Friday tentatively agreed to permit Northwest Airlines to fly nonstop between Minneapolis-St. Paul or Milwaukee and Atlanta and Florida points.

Other preliminary votes by the CAB in the Chicago-Milwaukee-Twin Cities case would provide better air service to and from those cities. The agency said its official findings and awards in the case will be contained in a formal opinion to be adopted early in 1959.

The board's decision would permit Northwest to overfly Chicago on flights between the Twin Cities or Milwaukee and the Southeast. Northwest was awarded a Chicago-Atlanta-Tampa-St. Petersburg-Miami route in the recent Great Lakes-Southeast service case decision.

OTHER FINDINGS

Other tentative findings by the board included:

Eastern Air Lines' route should be extended into Milwaukee and the Twin Cities from Chicago. The tentative vote included a requirement that Eastern's flights serving the Twin Cities or Milwaukee could only begin or end as far south as Nashville or Roanoke, and that such flights would serve at least two intermediate points north of those two cities.

This would mean no turn-around service by Eastern in the Chicago-Milwaukee-Twin Cities area and would prevent nonstop flights by Eastern to cities in the southeastern U.S. below Nashville and Roanoke from the Wisconsin or Minnesota points. It also would authorize the first one-plane, one-carrier service between the Twin Cities and Milwaukee and such cities as Indianapolis, Louisville and Cincinnati.

WERE DENIED

Other proposals in the case, including those by Western, Delta and North Central Airlines, were denied.

It could be several months before any of the tentatively authorized service could begin. The board said it could not predict when its official findings will be issued. It noted, however, that normally it allowed 60 days after issuance of a formal order for a carrier to ask for reconsideration.

CITY HALL

Planners Ask for 4 New Aides

By HERMAN HANCOCK

A push for an estimated $8,000 additional in salary accounts of the joint Atlanta-Fulton County planning office in the 1959 city budget will be launched immediately, Alderman Milton Farris, chairman of the aldermanic board's zoning committee, said Friday.

Farris said four additional employes, "two of whom should be competent and highly trained specialists in planning, must be added so long-range planning can be done and the employment of outside experts can be dispensed with."

"We have reached the place where we can do our own planning much more economically and efficiently than if we depend on sporadic aid from outside sources," Farris said. "We also would have a continuity of work if we kept on the job at all times instead of employing outside experts, who leave the city once a specific job is done and leave us with plans which we can not pursue with the present staff."

Farris said his committee already has talked to Mayor Hartsfield and "found him sympathetic and in full agreement to go along on the projected program." He added that Alderman John A. White and other members of the finance committee will be "acquainted with the problem and with its long-range economical and effective operation."

Col. Wyont Bean, planning engineer, said the projected new program will add only about $8,000 annually to existing payrolls. He pointed out that three jobs in the planning office for which money was allocated had not been filled because competent personnel could not be hired for the salaries provided.

"What we propose to do is to create another job and supplement the salaries already set up for the three unfilled posts in order to get experienced, trained engineers," Bean added. "We will save thousands of dollars over the years and will have a better planning program than we possibly could provide by employing outside experts for specific jobs. We will have a continuity to the planning program if we handle it through our office."

New Ocelot

Atlantans Saturday will get their first look at a new baby ocelot, one of the few born in captivity, when Johnny Dilbeck, Grant Park zoo manager, raises a curtain which has draped the cage for the past three weeks. The baby has been nicknamed "Little Jaguar." The ocelot is a native of South and Central America and is found occasionally in Texas.

Zoning Petitions

The joint Atlanta-Fulton County board of adjustment Friday approved nine zoning petitions for variations, adversed three, held one for further study and permitted one petitioner to withdraw his application.

Adversed were measures affecting sites on Buffington road, near Hightower road; on Leland terrace near Park place, and on Cardova drive, near Malante drive. Deferred was a measure affecting a tract on Rochell drive near Beecher street, and withdrawn was a proposal affecting a site on West Peachtree street near Beverly road. All other petitions were approved.

Sigma Delta Chi To Initiate 15 Members Here

Pearl Harbor, Hanukka To Be Marked Tomorrow

Jews, Christians Throughout Nation Recall 2 Great Fights for Freedom

By KAY McLEOD

Two struggles for freedom—one that was touched off 17 years ago and another that took place more than 2,000 years ago—will be commemorated this Sunday in synagogues and churches throughout the nation.

Judaism begins the annual observance of Hanukka, the eight-day holiday which commemorates the victory of the ancient Judeans over the Syrian army which sought to impose idolatry upon them.

Jews and Christians alike will look back to a Sunday morning 17 years ago when America's freedom was threatened by the Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor. In connection with the anniversary of Pearl Harbor, Sunday has also been designated as Pearl Harbor Day, and churches and synagogues will join in the observance.

In his annual Hanukka message, Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, noted that Hanukka and Pearl Harbor Day occur simultaneously this year and said:

"Pearl Harbor, the sudden and sodden graveyard of Jew and Christian, colored and white alike, is a vivid reminder that the recent hate-inspired dynamitings of synagogues and schools, the burned homes of Negroes in the North and South are directed not against one individual nor even one group—but against all individuals, all groups, all freedoms—and God."

He warned that religious, intellectual and political liberty cannot be secured once and for all. "They can only be protected and extended if each one of us accepts as a habitual mode of behavior and personal responsibility the day-by-day guarding of the rights of every human being."

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION

Mayor Heeth Varnedoe, of Thomasville, where the Southeastern Regional Headquarters of Civil and Defense Mobilization is located, issued a proclamation urging:

"On this Sabbath anniversary, let us, in our homes and in our accustomed places of worship, resolve to do our parts when called upon in family and community to learn, and act, to help save lives and prevent needless suffering if disaster should fall upon us."

Civil defense officials are urging Americans to pray for "Peace Through Preparedness."

In a letter cosigned by the Rev. Harrison McMains, chief of the CD Chaplain's Service, and Elliot R. Jackson, director of the Atlanta Metropolitan Area of CD, ministers have been asked to preach on civil defense, carry CD information in church bulletins and distribute CD literature after services.

FESTIVAL OF LIGHTS

Hanukka, sometimes called the Festival of Lights, commemorates the triumph, some 165 years before the Christian era, of the forces of Judah Maccabee over those of the Syrian King, Antiochus Epiphanes.

With victory, the Maccabeans cleansed the temple in Jerusalem of idols and rededicated it to the idea of monotheism.

Hanukka is observed in both the home and the synagogue. A special Hanukka ritual, traditional holiday melodies, sermons which emphasize the right to worship God as one sees fit, will be held in Atlanta synagogues and temples throughout the eight-day holiday.

In many Jewish homes the Hanukka candelabrum, a Menorah with nine holders, is lighted for eight nights, prayers of thanksgiving are said and gifts exchanged and also earmarked for the poor.

Special Hanukka service and parties will be held for military personnel. These are sponsored by the B'nai B'rith chapter in cooperation with the USO-JWB armed services committee.

Bishop Hyland Will Dedicate New Bookshop

The new Notre Dame bookshop will be dedicated at 4 p.m. Sunday by the Most Rev. Francis E. Hyland, Roman Catholic Bishop of Atlanta.

The new shop is located at 115 Peachtree St., NE. The shop, formerly located at 181 Peachtree, is operated by laymen. The nonprofit bookshop distributes Catholic information, operates a lending library and sells religious literature and objects.

Billy Graham

It's Best To Attend Your Home Church

QUESTION: We have recently moved into a new community where there is no church of our denomination. There is a church here with which we can agree with few reservations. Should we drive a great distance to a church of our own denomination, or could we serve where we are? They have asked me to teach a Sunday school class.

B. B.

ANSWER: I believe in denominational loyalty, but I also believe that Christians should witness where they live. Unless we show an interest and love for those in our community, people might get the idea that you are religious snobs—which of course you are not.

You say you agree with the doctrine of the local church with few reservations. I have found that nonessentials separate people more often than essentials. In reading the history of denominations, it is interesting to note that the great divisions have always resulted from somewhat minor differences. More important is to maintain a Christian attitude in spite of the differences between us. Some people call that "compromise"—others see it as Christian charity.

I have made up my mind to fellowship with all those who love Jesus Christ with all their heart, and are seeking to win men to Him. At the moment I am being criticized by a few people for doing this, but I would rather lose a few friends than the blessing and favor of my Lord. If you feel that you can be a blessing to these people who don't see quite eye to eye with you on every point, by all means serve where you will be the greatest blessing.

Mr. W. T.

They were holding a Georgia-Florida League meeting in Waycross back in 1946 and the late Herbert Bradshaw, then president of the host Bears, introduced me to W. T. Anderson.

"No matter where you go in the sports world," Bradshaw said, "you won't meet a finer man than Mr. W. T." I never have.

Outlar

The last time I saw Mr. Anderson was last Wednesday afternoon in the lobby of the Mayflower Hotel in Washington. He was, as always, in there pitching for his Georgia-Florida League. Thanks to his diligent devotion in 17 seasons as president, the Georgia-Florida became known as the outstanding Class D circuit in baseball.

Though his health hadn't been too good in recent years, Mr. Anderson looked exceptionally spry for a man of 67. He had said Wednesday that he felt wonderful personally, but he was worried about his league. The acute shortage of working agreements troubled him.

En route home to Leslie, Ga., Thursday night, Mr. Anderson suffered a fatal heart attack near Quantico, Va. Baseball has never lost a better friend. He was the Georgia-Florida League. While other leagues vanished in financial quicksand in recent years, the Georgia-Florida never folded for one reason. W. T. Anderson wouldn't allow it to fold.

When he told the league directors they'd be able to operate, they believed him. They often didn't know how, but they went along with Mr. W. T.

—It Was How He Played the Game

Banking was Mr. Anderson's business—he owned a bank in Leslie—but baseball was his profession. He didn't drink, smoke nor curse; but he was a regular guy, completely at home with the highest paid financier, or the lowest paid umpires. He didn't play golf, cards, hunt or fish. Baseball was his sole hobby; in fact, it was his life.

Why did such a shrewd man expend so much time and energy operating a league consistently surrounded by king-size headaches? Mr. Anderson's devotion to the league always puzzled me; he acted more like a doting parent than a president. One afternoon I stopped by Leslie to inquire why?

He was sitting there in his office at the bank. Why?

"I don't know whether I've done very much for the league, like you say I have," he said, "but the league has certainly done a lot for me. It keeps me busy in my spare time, and a busy man is usually happy."

Certainly the years that it was my pleasure to know Mr. Anderson, he was always busy and happy.

"I'm a small-town banker, fertilizer salesman and insurance man," he continued the explanation. "We're in an agricultural region, and most of my work comes in the first three months of the year. I'd get awful tired of sitting around here through the summer. At least I think I would, for I've never tried it." And he never did.

League presidents are consistently bombarded by irate directors because of umpires. And Mr. Anderson was unquestionably the only chief who ever went through entire seasons without receiving official complaints. The Georgia-Florida family didn't always approve of the umpiring, of course, but it had too much respect for Mr. Anderson to question him about his arbiters.

Ask any umpire who worked in the Georgia-Florida, and he'll tell you that Mr. Anderson was the best friend his profession ever had.

—Baseball Monument for a Major Leaguer

"No league is any better than its umpires," he always said. "I can't understand why you fellows criticize them in the papers. It amazes me that we're able to get umpires, when you consider the abuse they must take and the amount of money they make."

There is, of course, nothing attractive about the salary of a Class D umpire. But Mr. Anderson strived to supply his league with the most efficient men available.

Each spring he'd take a vacation and tour the umpire schools in Florida. He'd watch the student arbiters at work and hand-pick his men. And a recommendation from Mr. Anderson was about the finest stamp of approval an umpire could receive.

During the season, he met with his umpires twice a month to thrash out problems, but mainly to bolster their morale. And the boys stayed on their toes because they never knew when Mr. Anderson would be sitting in the bleachers checking on them. Unlike some presidents, he didn't inform the arbiters when he planned to be a spectator.

When baseball men mention the Georgia-Florida League, they seldom call it by name. They refer to it as W. T. Anderson's League, and that's exactly what it is. And down through the years they've called it the finest Class D league in the country, and W. T. Anderson was proud of that label. Only the classification was Class D, however, for W. T. Anderson was strictly a major leaguer.

Richards and Inman Face Louisville 'Skyscraper'

By MICKEY LOGUE

Confronted by Louisville's giant center and two jumping-jack forwards, Georgia Tech's Whack Hyder has geared Saturday's starting lineup for rebounding horsepower.

Sophomore Wayne Richards, a dedicated competitor in the decisive last seven minutes against Baylor, makes his first string debut at mammoth Freedom Hall in Louisville, Ky.

Hyder loses an inch of altitude by starting Richards over 6-8 junior Jim Riley, but he gains muscle and hustle.

"Wayne played a terrific ball game last night," Hyder said after Friday's workout. "He was especially good on the boards, and we're going to need all of the height we can get at Louisville."

Sophomore Fred Sawyer, Louisville's 6-11, 235-pound center, and forwards Don Goldstein (6-5) and John Turner (6-4) are the big boys expected to deal Tech trouble under the baskets.

"All Sawyer needs to be a fine player is playing time," scout Byron Gilbreath reported. "He's already a good straight jumper. He will be a terrific threat once he polishes his tipping.

"Goldstein is plenty tough at forward. We'll probably put Richards on him and (Frank) Inman on Sawyer, (Harold) Andrews is one of the better guards around."

Senior Andrews is called "Unk" because his nephew, Harley Andrews, is a Cardinal teammate.

"I saw Georgetown surprise 'em this week," Gilbreath continued. "They didn't hit but about 30 per cent of their shots. The ball just wasn't falling for 'em. Louisville still won on field goals, but lost at the foul line.

Sportscaster Al Ciraldo will broadcast the Tech-Louisville game Saturday night on radio station WGST. Air time is 9:15.

"Louisville has a much better team than Baylor (which Tech beat, 65-56). The Cardinals have better height, better shooting and a better bench than Baylor."

"Our biggest problem against Louisville will be shooting and on the boards," Hyder said. "They are individually good offensive players. We'll have to be 20 per cent better overall than we were against Georgia

Wayne Richards

Frank Inman

Teachers and Baylor to win. In other words, we'll have to be in mid-season form."

Hyder said Tech is hunting improvement in every department.

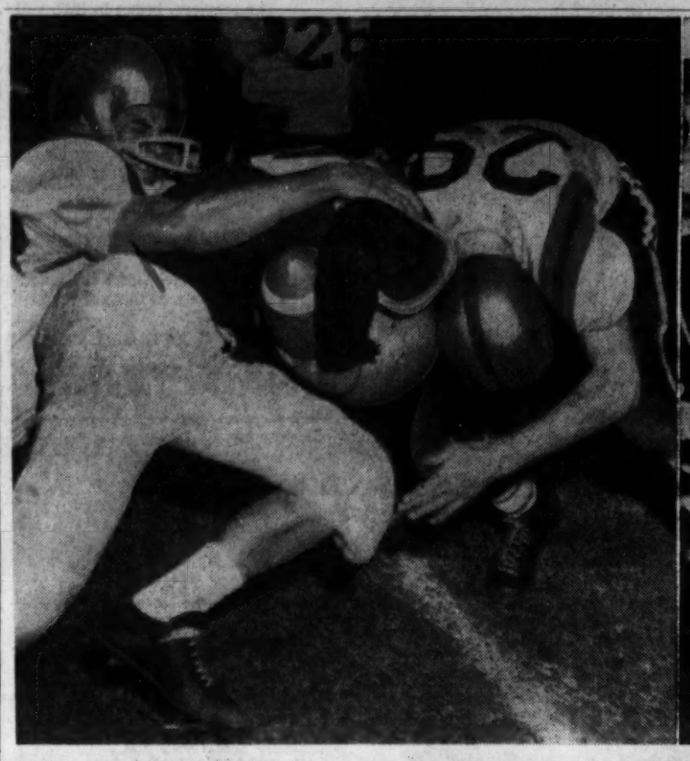

"Our overall play hasn't been good," he continued. "Offensively and defensively we are not reacting well. We're mishandling the ball and hesitating out there.

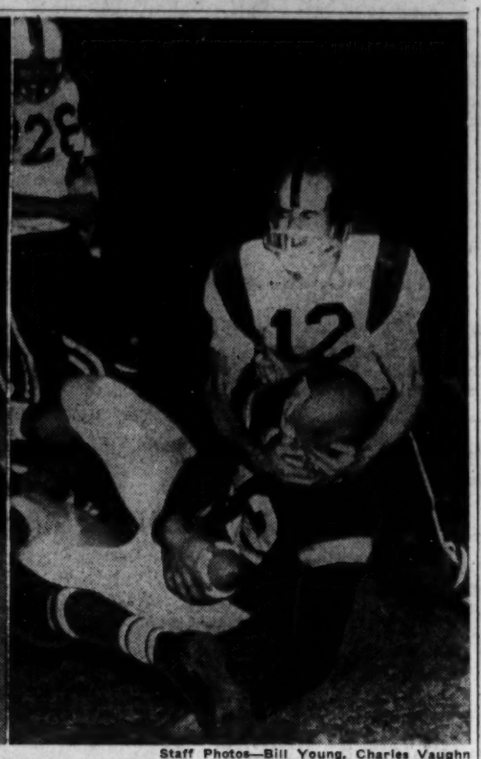

"They talk about teams depending on sophomores. Only four of the nine kids we're taking to Louisville aren't sophomores. Our sophomores saved us in the last few minutes against Baylor. But if we must depend on them to do it all season, it will be a long one."

Augustan Richards opens at forward alongside fellow rookie Roger Kaiser, a 6-2 Indianan. Kaiser leads the Jackets with 25 points and 23 rebounds.

Center Inman, an off-an-on 6-7 junior, completes Tech's up front cast. Senior guards Terry Randall and Buddy

Cheek Turns To Title, 13-6

Stephens Trips Forest Park For State Class A Crown

By PAUL ATKINSON

Victory No. 16 in a row and the 1958 Class A football championship came in one large swoop to Stephens County High School, and all because Red Amick's Indians had too much "Cheek."

Fullback-quarterback George Cheek took personal command of everything in sending his club past Forest Park, 13-6, before a standing-room-only chilled crowd of 6,000 at Russell Field Friday night.

Cheek, calling signals, picked out the right one late in the first quarter. He moved into quarterback, sent quarterback Ernie Prickett to fullback and found him in the open at the Panther 15. Prickett went in for a 39-yard touchdown maneuver, and boomed the point-after through to make it 7-0.

It stood that way until deep into the third quarter. Halfback Donald Cook, who had scored 29 touchdowns, suddenly became a key defensive operator. He and guard Jack Aaron smacked down Cheek for a one-yard loss as the Indians gambled for a first, needing one at their 38.

Fullback Wayne Smith, Panthers' leading rusher with 100 yards in 23 snaps, hit for five yards, halfback Ed Loving for four and Smith again for 1 and the first. Cook zipped for 10, but a five-yard penalty ate up five of that. Quarterback Jerry Watkins, however, looped a 21-yard touchdown pass to end Skippy Sanders on the fourth stanza's first play. Tackle Buddy Brock stopped Smith short of the point-after.

That wasn't enough for Stephens County. Halfback Richard Miller returned an onsides kick 16 to the Forest Park 34. Miller gained one, but a 15-yard penalty set the Indians back to the Panther 49. Miller lofted a 33-yard pass to Cheek, and Cheek, night's leading rusher with 108 yards,

Baseball Loses A Champion

Decatur Rips North Fulton

Bulldogs Win Title, 19-7, As Travis Scores Two TDs

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

Decatur's swashbuckling Bulldogs continued a comeback story unparalleled in Georgia high school football history by giving the oddsmakers and North Fulton's Bulldogs sound thrashings Friday night.

The 19-7 triumph, even more convincing than the score indicates, was achieved before 7,000 fans in frigid Decatur Stadium and catapulted the suburbanites into the state Class AAA playoff finals against LaGrange in LaGrange next Friday night.

Decatur, loser five times in its first six wrangles this season, captured its fifth in the last six outings by outplaying the City League champions in virtually every phase of play until rolling up a 19-0 lead early in the fourth quarter.

After that, when there was no doubt about the issue, the Buckhead Bulldogs, who entered the melee with 9-1-1 won-lost-tied credentials, finally swept 58 yards to their lone touchdown on the pitching arm of Woody Woodall.

But the home folks, who allowed the invaders only 43 yards rushing, were in almost complete command until they had assured themselves of the victory. Jeff Travis, 6-3, 185-pound quarter-

Baseball Men Deplore Death Of Ga.-Fla. Loop's Anderson

Heart Attack Hits Prexy

By AL THOMY

Walter T. Anderson, 67, president of the class D Georgia-Florida League for 17 years, died as he had lived . . . defending the game he loved.

Mr. W. T., as he was affectionately known, suffered a fatal heart attack Thursday near Quantico, Va., as he and three others were returning from the stormy minor league meeting in Washington.

Accompanying him on the return automobile trip were Jim Wyche of Jacksonville, general manager of the Brunswick Phillies; John Monfre, general manager of the Albany Cardinals, and Spud Chandler, former New York Yankee pitcher and a long-time Georgia resident.

A native of Ochlochnee, Anderson had lived in Leslie since 1912 and was president of the State Board of Education and of the Sumter County Commission.

Before taking over the Georgia-Florida reins in 1941, Anderson had been president of the Americus club. His baseball genius was credited with keeping the league operating during the recent dark days of baseball, during which many minor leagues called it quits.

He is survived by his wife, the former Bessie Summerford; a son, W. T. Anderson Jr.; a daughter, Mrs. W. D. Webb of Tifton; a sister and two brothers.

The body is expected to reach Leslie about noon Saturday. Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at the Leslie Methodist Church.

Larry Brumit of Brunswick, vice president of the league, said he would call a meeting within 10 days to select a successor to Mr. Anderson.

His good friend, Judge James W. Smith of Americus, best described Mr. Anderson.

"If he could have picked a way to die, he would have chosen the way it happened," said Judge Smith, "with his baseball shoes on. The thing that most impressed me about W. T. was his 100 per cent fairness . . . with everyone."

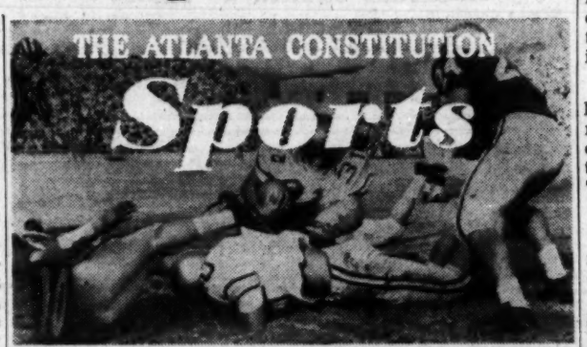

Comments on the passing of Mr. Anderson:

Elmer Mackey, president of the Dublin club: "I don't know what to say. His death was a shock to me. As far as the league's concerned, I don't know which way we can turn to replace him. Due to Mr. Anderson's unselfish support, the Georgia-Florida has been held together. Even when things looked hopeless, he never gave up."

Erin Johnson, Waycross club president: "This is certainly a shock to me. Mr. Anderson was one of the outstanding baseball men in the country. I had known him for 15 years, and I don't know a man who's done more for baseball. The Georgia-Florida has lost one of the finest men in the game . . . a fine, Christian gentleman. He always fought for us, and maybe that was his trouble at the end . . . he was still fighting."

Earl Mann, owner-president of

Miami, Oregon Collide in TV Grid Windup

By United Press International

The nation's armchair quarterbacks get a chance to warm up for the Jan. 1 bowl games by watching Saturday telecasts of two college football contests.

Miami of Florida plays host to Oregon and Holy Cross visits Boston College to provide the NBC-TV network's final two 1958 college football telecasts. TV time for the games is 1:15 p.m., e.s.t.

The Boston College-Holy Cross telecast will be seen in New England and Middle Atlantic states while the rest of the nation's TV viewers will see the Florida game. Oregon is favored by six points and Holy Cross by five.

The Oregon-Miami encounter should furnish some wide-open football. Oregon uses about a dozen variations of the basic T, shooting double-wingbacks, flankers and men in motion at the opposition. Willie West is the key man in the Oregon offense. He is the team's leading ground-gainer and pass catcher.

Miami, which will attempt to end its worst season in years with a victory, depends heavily upon the passes of quarterbacks Fran Curci and Bonnie Yarbrough, two left-handers. Curci has completed 85 for 854 yards and eight touchdowns but the team has won only one of nine games. Oregon has a 4-5 record.

Holy Cross (6-2) and Boston College (6-3) also are expected to throw plenty of passes. Tom Greene will do the tossing for Holy Cross while little John Amabiel, a substitute for Don Allard, will throw for Boston College. Allard, rated one of the college game's top passers this season, is sidelined with a broken collarbone.

The NAIA playoffs which will decide the opponents for the Dec. 20 Holiday Bowl game at St. Petersburg, Fla., also will be staged Saturday. Northeastern (Okla.) will meet St. Benedict's (Kan.) at Tulsa, Okla., while Gustavus - Adolphus (Minn.) will play Arizona State College at Tucson, Ariz., in these games.

Soph-Heavy Tigers Shoot for Revenge

Rookies Groover, Gilbert, Fibbe Start Against Baylor

Youth will have its fling when Auburn pursues revenge Saturday night. Coach Joel Eaves, of necessity, plans to start three sophomores against Baylor.

Forwards Ray Groover and Porter Gilbert and center Jimmy Fibbe, rookies all, have received an early call to first string service.

Groover and Gilbert opened in the losing exhibition scrap with the Phillips Oilers Thursday, but this is Fibbe's starting debut.

As though graduation, injuries and major league baseball had not proven problems enough for Auburn's basketball team, Eaves learned Friday that regular center Bill Gregory probably won't play against the Bears.

"Gregory already had been battling a knee injury," Eaves said, "and Friday had to stay in bed with an upset stomach. He is very doubtful for Saturday, and if he plays at all, it will be mighty little."

Thus Kentuckian Fibbe's shot at a starting post.

"We got quite a lesson last night," Eaves continued. "They are better than any Oiler team we have played. But our boys enjoy playing them, and they learn by it."

Asked for bright spots in Auburn's early hardwood picture, Eaves replied: "Our young boys have played pretty well. We don't expect them to go out and set the woods on fire, but they're doing all right.

"Seven of the 13 men we used against Phillips—five of the first 10—were sophomores. (Bayward) McManus, Gilbert, Groover, Fibbe and (David) Vaughn did encouraging jobs. Jimmy Lee reported in the best shape of his career, and should have a good senior season."

There also is a dark side.

"We have to improve a lot defensively," Eaves said. "I don't know what we can do about the lack of height. With Rex (Captain Frederick) back, we will have fair size. But without him we are too small.

"Unfortunately, it appears Frederick will take longer getting over his operation than we had anticipated. He's got to build a leg muscle back, and it might be January before he returns."

Auburn had hoped its 6-5 all-Southeastern Conference forward would be ready for the Dec. 17 game with Florida State.

He agrees that Baylor presents Auburn's first authentic collegiate test. Jacksonville State was too weak and the Oilers too strong to supply a reasonable estimate of the Tigers' strengths and weaknesses.

"We've got a lot of respect for Baylor," Eaves added. "They worked us over last year. We have a little debt to settle with these people, so we'll be there."

Game time is 8:30 p.m. (EST) at the Auburn Sports Arena.—LOGUE swept right end on a determined run to get the clinching TD.

The victory climaxed an amazing season for Stephens County. They rolled to 12 wins in a row, scoring 358 points to their foes' 45. It, as noted, was the Indians' 16th in a row, dating back to '57's final four games. Amick-coached teams at Eastanollee have the glittering record of 19-2-1.

For Forest Park, it was a case of closer but still no championship. Pat Patterson's team, suffering its first defeat against 10 wins and a tie, also was in the '57 finals, but bowed to Statesboro, 27-0.

Statistically, it was a close one, also. Stephens County had a total offense edge of 242-230, Forest Park led in first downs, 15-9.

Amick singled out center Paul McClain, Brock, tackle Dwight Anderson, whose tackle of Smith stopped Forest Park's last-gasp bid for victory in the game's final four minutes, and end Jerry Bailey. "This is a good defensive team," Amick said. "Last season we gave up only 57 points, now this year a better 45.

"We'll give 'em that yardage in between the 20s, but then the boys really buckle down. Naturally, we like to score, too. And we get that from Cheek, Miller and Ernie Prickett.

"This was a splendid group of boys with which to work. They just play well together, and that's the secret."

STARS OF TOMORROW

'LITTLE MEN' OF ORR SCHOOL COLLIDE TODAY ON GRIDIRON

By MAC CHAPLIN

For the 28th time small-fry gridders tangle at the Fritz Orr Club-School in a quadruple-header football show, kicking off at 1 p.m. Saturday.

On this alumni day such names as Tech's Wade Mitchell and Stan Gann, Georgia's Jim Roberts, Northside's Matt Howard and Westminster's Bonneau Ansley will be remembered as mites who became giants.

Appropriately, the 155 pint-sizers are divided into three classes—Mites, Midgets and Giants. Each group has two teams except the Midgets, who have four.

Mites is the youngest classification, being limited to seven and eight-year-olds. Next are the fourth and fifth-graders or the Midgets. Then come the Giants, 11 and 12-year-olds.

The seven and eight-year-olds start the afternoon with their Army-Navy game and the next three games follow with the Giants capping the show.

Coach Paul Kniepkamp's Navy team and Curtis Beavers' Army team will play six-minute quarters. Navy's co-captain backs Jeff Ross and Ricky Agel are slated to see plenty of action. Army'll put its chips on co-captain Tee Groom and tackle Fred Brown.

A double-header is lined up for the Midgets. Two White teams battle a couple of Blue teams. Ronald Higgingbotham-coached Whites pit halfback Richard Howell against Blue sparkplug QB Neal Howard in one encounter, while Chris Brandon's Blues depend on left half Steve Freant and field general John Imrie to offset the Whites' offensive-minded end Bob Richardson and QB Jerry Mills.

Offense and defense are equally important in the last contest between two squads of a Giant team that dropped only a pair of an eight-game schedule this season in inter-club play.

Wade Mitchell

Stan Gann

Butch Carter

White coach Joe Soldati possesses an excellent blocker in back Bill Milton and a "hard nosed" tackle in Dardie Neely.

But Blue mentor Bobby Charnley is betting on his 1-2-3 punch of fullback William Carter, right half Woody Tison and left end Wayne Williams. Carter, whose brother, Butch, earned a spot on Tech's defensive unit, is an agile linebacker. Tison punts and is a constant gainer, while Williams contains tricky passes with his speed and snagging ability.

School founder Fritz Orr smiled proudly as he told of the good records his small-fry footballers have achieved like last year's Giant team that went untied and unbeaten before winning the Key West, Fla., Conch Bowl.

Each of the eight teams elected sponsors and the co-captains will escort them on the field during half-time ceremonies. Other than this, the day will be all football.

Head coach and athletic director Buddy Fowlkes expressed the goal of the program, "With this experience we hope to give the boys confidence in their personal abilities. It's something they'll find valuable in football and in life."

"Look at some of our pupils," he added, "a lot of them go to Northside and Westminster. We like to think we're a part of their success."

Other selections were guard Rodney Breedlove, Maryland; center Dave Lloyd, Georgia; tackle Bobby Tribble, Mississippi State, and Ben Scotti, Maryland, and fullback Neil MacLean, Wake Forest.

Jordan Lifts Title From Shaky Akins

Californian Unhinges Champ In 15-Round Welter Feature

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Underrated Don Jordan of Los Angeles captured the welterweight championship of the world Friday night as he handed Virgil Akins of St. Louis a bad beating to win a 15-round decision.

The 24-year-old challenger, a 3-1 underdog going into the ring at the Olympic Auditorium despite his rating as the No. 1 contender, all but knocked out the 30-year-old titleholder. He won the unanimous verdict by a substantial margin.

This was the first defense of the crown by Akins since he won clear claim to it in knocking out Vince Martinez in St. Louis last June.

After the first few rounds of the nationally televised fight, it was apparent that Akins was in for a rough evening.

Akins was an even money favorite to knock out Jordan, something no other fighter had done in the Californian's 55 previous fights. The 30-year-old Akins was the one who was hanging on and all but wrecked in the 10th.

As it turned out, Jordan never was seriously hurt and Akins managed to stay on his feet for the full 15. An estimated 7,000 fans cheered the local youngster from bell to bell.

Mat Tussle No Contest

Tag team match between Paul Anderson-Chief Little Eagle and Fred Blassie-Dick The Bruiser was ruled no contest after 18 minutes Friday night at City Auditorium wrestling show.

Decatur Rolls to AAA Title, 19-7 back who was smarting from being ignored by pickers of all-state teams, was the guiding genius of almost all offensive maneuvering.

Travis, faking with deftness, completed 3 of 5 passes for 19 yards, ran 13 keepers for 44 hard-nosed yards and scored the first and third touchdowns from three and one yards out. In addition, he intercepted a mid-third quarter Woodall pass at Decatur's 17-yard stripe and ran it back 18 yards to the 35.

SECOND, THIRD and fourth quarter scoring drives of 26, 58 and 68 yards were all overland ventures except for an 11-yard Travis-Robert Powell pass collaboration that set up the second score at the North Fulton 21.

Those first two drives featured the bullish running of Travis, Billy Lee and Gordon Cranford, who cleated terra firma for 60 yards on 14 carries and 70 on 17, respectively, during the night. The final TD binge highlighted 220-pound Powell, who bashed for 3, 3 and 25 yards on three of his four lugs night-long.

Woodall, North Fulton's all-state quarterback, completed 9 of 20 passes for 109 yards and a touchdown. But eight of 11 found their marks for 88 yards in the four go-round after Coach Charlie Hall's Region 4-AAA champs had a 19-0 lead that assured them of winning the North Georgia crown.

Lee, playing end on defense, and all-state tackle Joe Martin led a slashing Decatur line that kept Woodall in a state of duress every time he tried to get off a pitch. Rocky Ross, Tommy Lucus, Reeder Glass and Joe Ansley—plus Powell, who plays head-on-the-center on defense—were almost equally effective in the savage up-front play that kept the home troops in command.

Bill Van Dyke, all-state guard, made more tackles than any player on the field. He and backs Wade St. John and Bill Plunket, who also made far more than their share, were the sore-thumb stickouts for North Fulton's lost cause.

Decatur, which allowed the Buckhead folks only one yard rushing in the first half, posted a 6-0 lead on the scoreboard early in the second stanza after Woodall—who had just toed a 47-yarder—was rushed and got off an 18-yard punt to his own 26. Cranford ground out 22 yards on three lugs, Lee pushed one and Travis swept end for the final three.

Lee began the 58-yard third quarter payoff push with a three-yard skip and finished it with romps of 9 and the final 12. End David Hogg blocked the conversion try, leaving it 12-0.

Powell's 25-yard dash and Travis' 11-yard sweep to the North Fulton six were the meat of the final TD march. Travis bolted around end for the final yard, and Doug McAfee booted the 19th point.

David Truby's 20-yard punt return instigated North Fulton's 58-yard scoring surge. Charles Boyd's 11-yard rip was the lone productive ground try, so Woodall pitched the rest of the way, hitting Cam Crockett and Truby once each and Hogg three times. He rifled a slant shot to Hogg for the last two yards and kicked the extra point, the two plays averting a shutout.

THIS ANGLER GOT HOOKED BY HIS OWN FISHING TALE

By CHARLES ELLIOTT
Constitution Outdoor Columnist

My home town paper is the Covington News. Sometimes I sit down and read one of the weekly editions from cover to cover. It brings me close to the folks I used to know back at home. Quite often I get clippings from the paper, sent by some member of my clan, or by a friend.

Charles Elliott

The other day Aubra Sherwood mailed an item to me out of the Covington News. It said in effect that an old hunting and fishing partner I've known for many years, city policeman Chubb Ivey, had hooked and landed a 5-pound bream out of a local fish pond.

Now the first time I ever saw Chubb Ivey was down on Jackson Lake, more than 30 years ago. I was hunting ducks over decoys, and he and Charles Candler framed up on me. Chubb slipped around a corner of the point where I had my decoys set and unloaded his double-barrel 12-gauge into them, upending one or two of the wooden blocks. I jumped up, gun in hand, ready to duel and he pretended to apologize profusely, swearing he thought they were real ducks. I don't know how it would have ended, if I hadn't seen Charlie Candler rolling around in the brush, holding his sides. At the time, I didn't think it was a bit funny.

So when I read about the 5-pound bream, I could see my old hunting partner as a hero, with a world record fish, and my home town and county in the national spotlight. The largest bream on record is a 4-pound, 12-ounce mammoth, taken more than eight years ago at Ketona Lake, in Alabama.

I got Chubb on the telephone to congratulate him and he seemed embarrassed. But you know how these news hounds are—I kept pumping and finally got a story that was better than the one I really expected to hear.

"Well—doggonit!" Chubb said, "what happened was that this guy and I have been trying to outdo one another with a pole and line for years. About two weeks ago, I caught a 7½-pound bass. When I showed it to him, he got green under the collar. So, the other day when I met him on the street, he stopped me and said he'd just brought in an 11½-pound largemouth. I knew it was a big fib, so I said, "Shucks—you ain't got nothin'. I caught a 5-pound bream in a pond yesterday afternoon."

Chubb said that one of the reporters working for the Covington News overheard the conversation and dashed off to the paper to make his report, which resulted in the story.

"I didn't catch no bream that big," Chubb said, "but durned if I can make anybody believe I didn't. Everybody in town has congratulated me at least once. Now they're all mad at me. Some of them are real sore because I won't tell them where the place is. That mythical fish has got me about as popular around here as an epidemic of the measles."

"Boy," he said, "I'll tell you one thing. From here on out, this is one guy who's going to subtract from the weight of any fish he catches, instead of adding to it."

Reventlow Passes Up Pit Stop And Rides Worn Tires to Cup

Hawkeyes' Evy Getting Raise

From Press Dispatches

Gambling Lance Reventlow disdained a pit stop and rode worn tires to victory in the 25-lap Governors Cup Race Friday during Nassau's "Speed Week."

The son of heiress Barbara Hutton piloted his 5,400 cc Scarab 112½ miles over a tricky 4½-mile course at an average speed of 88.642 m.p.h. It was the first time since 1924 an American-built car has won an international sports car race.

George Constantine (3910 cc Class C Aston Martin) was second, followed by Ed Crord (4500 c.c. Maserati), Pedro Rodriguez Jr. (2996 c.c. Ferrari) and Ricardo Rodriguez (Class F 1498 c.c. Porsche).

Constantine drove the same car to victory in a five-lap race which proceeded the Governor's Cup. E. D. Martin of Columbus was third in a 2953 c.c. Ferrari.

Baker-Led Rossville Invades Avondale

North Georgia Title Battle To Get Under Way at 2:30

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

Rossville High's Bulldogs will sweep into Avondale Stadium at 2:30 Saturday afternoon hoping to make a daytime nightmare of the Blue Devils' dream of winning their first state football championship.

Coach Frank Fabris and aides Glenn Murdock, Toppy Vann and Jim McDaniel lead this invasion for the North Georgia Class AA title with a solid unit that posted a 9-2-0 won-lost-tied chart and churned relentlessly to the Region 3-AA crown.

Fabris, who moulded strong teams at Vidalia and Cartersville in previous seasons, says his upstate Bulldogs have gone this far with great desire—the finest he's had from an entire team.

AVONDALE		ROSSVILLE
19 Decatur	14	0 Bradley T.	14

54 Sprayberry	0	7 R. Bank, T.	13
20 Druid Hills	0	16 Cedartown	13
20 Westmi'ster	13	20 Cedartown	6

Avondale's great speed and striking force figure to be slowed considerably by a sound Rossville line, led by all-state tackle Roy Brown, who stands 6-3 and weighs 220, and his running mate Glenn Campbell, 6-0, 190 defensive signal caller and line backer.

Johnny Shaw (180) and Floyd Shadrick (185) lend strength and agility at end. And three much-used guards—Clyde Beavers (180), Edmund Whitlock (180) and Norman Carter (170)—present a solid middle along with Jimmy Beane, 150-pound center who is a four-year letter winner, has great know-how and played on Rossville's 1955 team that shared the state AAA title with LaGrange.

Edward Kinsey (190) is a regular tackle on defense, and end Jerry Williams (160) and tackle Billy Au (235) also see considerable action and give needed line depth.

Quarterback Wink Baker, 160-pound junior who hates to be reminded his real name is Harold and that he is the little brother of Furman University's fine passer Billy—who preceded him at Rossville—is the key to the Bulldogs' offense. He hit about 50 per cent of his passes this season.

Left half Charlie Morgan is a fine runner and the best punter in the Chattanoooga, Tenn., area. He averaged just under 40 yards per kick and quick-kicked seven times for a 52-yard average. The second field goal of his career beat Cedartown, 16-13, and he'll be going for a three-pointer against Avondale if the opportunity presents itself.

Right half Doug Haney, 160-pound junior, ran for such heavy yardage in one game that he was chosen The Constitution's back of the week. Fullback Donald Forrester (160), who co-captains the team with Whitlock, is also an able workman.

Two sophs, Billy Arnold and Gerald Williams — fastest back around—are scatbacks who help generate the offense, too, along with Joe Blevins, 170-pound junior fullback. This is the crew that is expected to sorely test Avondale's Frank James, David Browning, Mark Thompson, Bill Lash, Kit Bell and company.

C Title Match To Thomaston

THOMASTON (AP) — The State Class C football championship game between Hawkinsville and West Point will be played in Thomaston Thursday, Sam Burke, executive secretary of the Georgia High School Assn., said Friday.

Hawkinsville battled its way into the finals by dumping defending Class C titlist Waynesboro, 8-7, in Waynesboro Thursday night for the South Georgia C crown. West Point beat Chattanooga Valley, 20-0.

Tribute to Anderson: Unselfish Support Kept League Together

the Atlanta Crackers: "Mr. Anderson was a wonderful and devoted business and baseball man, an outstanding citizen. It's great we have men like him in the game who do their fine work without any compensation whatsoever. Everyone in baseball will miss him."

Hershel Lovett, former president of the now defunct Georgia State League and a personal friend: "I'm very sorry to hear the news. Mr. Anderson was a high type gentleman and did a great deal for sports, and baseball in particular. He was a good moral man. I know the Georgia-Florida will find it difficult to operate without him."

Guy Connell, president of Waycross club, presently out of the league: "Mr. W. T. was a mighty fine, Christian gentleman, loyal to his friends and baseball. He was devoted to the game as much as any man can be. Everyone who knew him considered him honest to the core . . . a man you had to admire."

Larry Brumit, head of the Brunswick club and league vice president: "It's a big loss to baseball in general. No one did more for baseball in the South than Mr. W. T. He fought for the league; he fought for baseball. I didn't always agree with him—particularly his interpretation of the rules—but he stuck by them."

Judge James W. Smith, city court of Americus and a close friend: "Mr. W. T. was one of the nicest men I've known. He meant a whole lot to the town and county, and kept the Georgia-Florida League going the last two years. He did a heap of good in baseball. I'd be glad to speak any time about a man such as Mr. W. T."

THIS WAS NOT NICE TO COME HOME TO LAST FEBRUARY
Flames Ate Away Apartment on Chalmette Drive

Fire Sparked New Theme For Decorating Home

By YOLANDE GWIN

Last February Mrs. Herman Gross was driving along Briarcliff road on her way home from a bridge game at the club.

In the distance she saw smoke swirling up into the sky in the vicinity of her apartment on Chalmette drive.

The next thing she remembers she was standing in front of the ice-coated apartment holding a small silver cup. That was all that was saved from the furnishings of her two-storied apartment.

"I was in such a panic getting through the traffic and fire lines that I hardly remember anything," she said the other day. "Everything—an accumulation of 38 years of married life was gone. All the furnishings my late husband and I had collected were destroyed. For that reason I decided to redecorate the apartment in an entirely new theme and follow a contemporary line."

NEW LOOK

Pictures of her apartment's "new look" are shown on this page. Mrs. Gross, had an eye toward a complete change over, even to the apartment's floor plan was changed.

"What once had been the sun room on the front here," she said, waving toward the street, "is now a part of my drawing room. I had the room enlarged. Then at the rear, the back porch was enclosed and is now an eating area beside the kitchen."

Mrs. Gross' bedroom on the second floor is directly over the drawing room and it too has been enlarged due to the overall "face lifting."

The entrance hall, with a white marbelized floor features a massive and very unusual wrought iron antique hat stand. The piece, of Italian background, has been further glamorized by a gold and white "dressing."

DRAWING ROOM

Steps lead upstairs from this entrance hall. Two steps take one down into the drawing room. This room and the adjoining dining room have oyster white wall-to-wall carpeting. There is a large three-cushioned Italian couch in this room with tables at each end holding four-foot high Meissen lamps. Floor-length draperies match the carpet and appear to be a continuation of the oyster white walls. Shades of the same color have fringe scalloped borders. An antique French cabinet holds many interesting curios while a heavy brass Japanese hibachi is used for a planter.

There is an oyster white brocade covered couch before which stands a low marble-topped coffee table, the duo forming an intimate setting. Exquisite carving of the table legs is a point of interest. For her interest and love of bridge, Mrs. Gross has a card table and four chairs always ready for game time. Italian wall sconces add an effective note.

In another section of the room, Mrs. Gross has used a long glass-topped table before an oversized couch. It is actually a curio table and through its glass top a visitor may view a variety of unusual antiques the owner has collected on her travels. There are things such as old watches, unusual spoons, and an oriental tea set to name a few.

The oyster white carpeting extends into the adjoining dining room where the walls are white brocade. Table, buffet and chairs are Italian. The cane bottom chairs have sand-colored cotton cushions. The buffet is centered by an unusual German china urn and flanked on either side by bronze candelabra on marble bases. An unusual note here are the slender 24-inch tall tapers. There are white floor length draperies.

When the apartment was redecorated, Mrs. Gross had part of the kitchen arranged as a breakfast nook. The all-over pattern is pink even to the floor covering, and the built in appliances. One decorative note is the hanging "basket". In reality it is a French helmet of ancient age which Mrs. Gross has had restored and used for a colorful harvest collection of fruits and flowers.

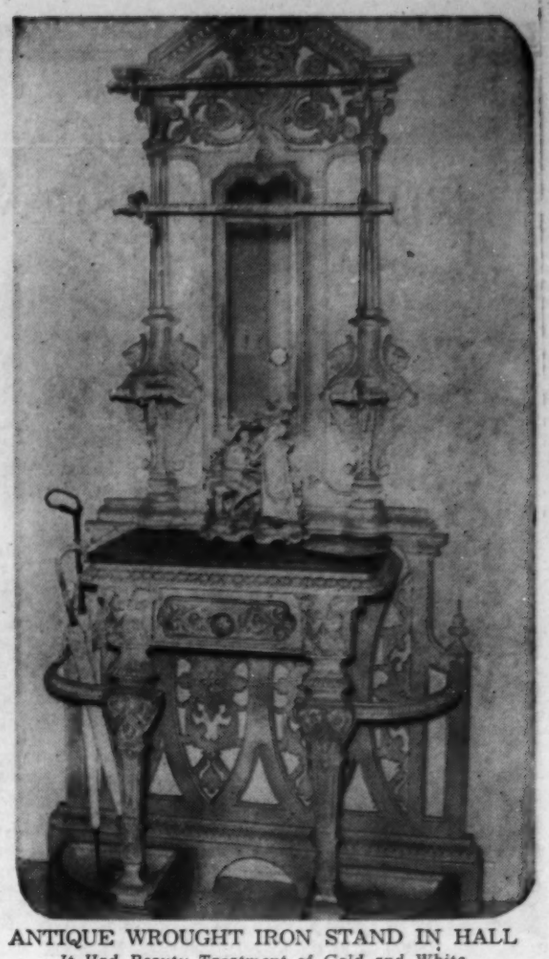

ENGLISH TABLE

An English table in this room with four chairs is placed beside the window where there are two tiered louvered blinds.

The bedroom directly over the drawing room is done in a French provincial theme, with color motifs of beige and pink. The twin beds have a double headboard and coverlets are embroidered satin.

Although Mrs. Gross has chosen wisely and well in the antiques for her new home, she nevertheless was lured by one whimsical modern item. It is a three-foot tall glass duck in Mediterranean blue. It is very streamlined and modern.

"I saw him in a shop in Fort Lauderdale," said Mrs. Gross. "He had such a sad look in his eyes I was captivated and brought him home with me. In fact, he has more personality than anything in my home."

Ashcrafts Are Building Home On the Mexican Border

Those former Atlantans, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Ashcraft, who moved to Houston, Tex., a few years ago, are now Arizona ranchers. They have bought a ranch two miles from Sasabe, which is 65 miles from Tucson, and with their daughter, Earle, are now "pioneering" there while their home is under construction.

"We are at the remotest border crossing into Mexico," writes Mrs. Ashcraft, "and our house will be built right on the Mexican border fence."

Adobe is being made by hand in Mexico for the house. So far the Ashcrafts have only "two wells and some power lines," they say. They plan to call their place Rancho Gustavo.

Another daughter, Betty Cole Ashcraft is a student at the University of Texas and their son, Lee, is a seventh grader at the Southern Arizona School in Tucson.

MR. AND MRS. J. P. GARLINGTON are off today for Chattanooga to spend the weekend with their son and daughter, the James W. Next Saturday evening, Dec. 13, Mr. and Mrs. Paris will entertain at open house for the Reginald Bells, whose marriage was an event of last summer.

Lt. and Mrs. Oastler are to be among the attendants at Miss Dorothy Bancker's marriage to Dr. Robert P. Holmes III on Dec. 11. Mrs. Oastler is the bride-elect's sister and will serve as matron of honor. Lt. Oastler will be a groomsman.

MEMBERS OF THE PHI KAPPA TAU fraternity will entertain at luncheon today at the Luau in compliment to their national president, Roland Maxwell of California, and their executive secretary, Dick Young of Ohio.

Warren Covington Lifts Dorsey Baton

By BETTY CARROLLTON

The great music of "the sentimental gentleman" is living on through the baton lifted by a handsome, talented youth who has dedicated his talent to keeping alive the traditions of the late Tommy Dorsey.

The decision to place Tommy's distinguished baton into the hands of Warren Covington, who is starring with the Dorsey musicians at the sports car show at the municipal auditorium this weekend, was a logical award for achievement, designed to insure the preservation of the never-to-be-forgotten music of maestro Dorsey. And the baton is in good hands.

As a musician, Warren's brilliant trombone work has been featured with some of America's top bands, including Horace Heidt, Gene Krupa, Les Brown and Ray Bloch. His ability has been recognized by Ed Sullivan, Steve Allen, Perry Como and Arthur Godfrey — just a few of the TV personalities with whom Warren has worked on their national telecasts.

As a singer, Warren has run the gamut from the church choir in his home town, Philadelphia, to his own CBS radio show, "Covington Sings." And as an outstanding music teacher, he has enjoyed the "gratifying experience" of seeing virtually all of his students graduate to top positions with name bands.

His easy friendliness and remarkable talent, when combined with the music of "the sentimental gentleman" assures great success to the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, starring Warren Covington.

CHRISTMAS CHARMERS: Walt Disney presents a charming holiday musical treat in "The Symphony Under the Stairs," starring "The All-Mouse Symphony and Chorus, under the direction of Ludwig Mousensky"—a delightful concoction of "Jingle Bells," "Winter Wonderland," "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," "Little Town of Bethlehem" and "Come All Ye Faithful," on a single disc. . . . The Chipmunks join David Seville to perform another delightful novelty, "The Chipmunk Song," one of the brightest Yule discs in many a season. The gimmick voices of the Chipmunks add to the clever arrangement, backed with "Almost Good." . . . Young Augie Rios, singing sensation of the Broadway musical "Jamaica," scores with his "Donde Esta (Where Is) Santa Claus?" an appealing tune coupled with rousing "'Ol Fatso," a novelty note with a youngster chasing Santa off the roof. Same song has been waxed by The Four Aces, backed with pleasant "The Christmas Tree." . . . It couldn't happen to a nicer guy: "Santa Meets the Witch Doctor" is Sheb Wooley's contribution to holiday festivities.

DANDY DISCS: With his initial waxing, "The Diary," young Neil Sedaka emerges as an important music world personality. He turns in a fine performance, and the disc, with "No Vacancy" as the flip, is hailed as this week's winner. . . . Ray Hartley, whose brilliant package, "Trembling of a Leaf," established him as a polished performer in the U.S., heads for the charts with new single "I Remember It Well" and "Beyond the Purple Hills." . . . The Mills Brothers have a strong contender in "Yellow Bird," backed with "Baby Clementine." . . . Patience and Prudence wax a winner in "Tom Thumb's Tune" and "Golly, Oh, Gee." . . . Tony Bennett gives "Love Look Away," from the musical production "Flower Drum Song," his usual splendid treatment, and once more turns atttention to "Blue Moon" for the flip. . . . Jim Reeves' "Billy Bayou" and "I'd Like To Be" should soar. . . . Connie Francis returns to the winners' circle with "My Happiness" and "Never Before." . . . Teresa Brewer clicks with bright ditty, "Satellite," backed with "The One Rose." . . . Gale Storm's fine job on "Happiness Left Yesterday" and "Oh, Lonely Crowd" merits steady-spinning. . . . The Hilltoppers trek upward with "Trying" and "You're Nobody Till Somebody Loves You."

ALBUM APPLAUSE: The talents of Enoch Light and the Light Brigade shine brightly in a fine new package of happy listening, "I Want To Be Happy Cha Cha's," an exciting series of smart arrangements based on Latin rhythms. The strong rhythmic patterns and unusual instrumentation of the cha cha arrangements give the brilliant musicians an opportunity to showcase their outstanding abilities. Enoch and the Light Brigade lead off this spectacular album with their original hit of the title tune (backed on the single with "Cara Mia Cha Cha") and continue to present a series of listening delight.

For her "Precious Memories" package, Rose Maddox has included many of her own favorites, and brings to her interpretations a refreshing simplicity that underlines the expressive statements of the lyrics. The songs of devotion Rose so capably presents range from old hymn tunes and spirituals to examples of present-day songs.

And The Chuck Wagon Gang, a group that for more than 20 years has been bringing heartlifting songs to millions of admirers, exhibit their talents to best advantage for their "Sacred Songs" album

Sylvan's 'Golden Bear' School Spirit Champion

"To Sylvan High, our alma mater, dear . . . We lift our voices clear . . . And pledge to thee . . . our love and loyalty . . . that lasts eternally . . . Though the years bring many changes . . . And we may wander far from you . . . We'll ere uphold . . . the black and gold . . . that stands for Sylvan High."

Those words rang out clearly from the cheering section of Sylvan's football games this year, to climax students' efforts to spark school spirit. And regardless of the scoring record of the teams, 1958 will go down in the school's history as THE year. For the first time in its history, Sylvan this year boasts its own alma mater, and its first home-coming queen. Throughout the year, sparked by Len Miller, emphasis has been on school spirit, and the student body made the honor roll of sportsmanship for their all-out support of the team, win or lose.

"I don't know why we never before had an alma mater, or a home-coming," declared Len, "unless it's because no one took the time to get the ball rolling. But we've more than made up for it now."

And, indeed, Sylvan students have presented some of the most colorful halftime shows of any school, highlighted by the first home-coming. The many hours of practice put in by various pep squads paid off in applause and appreciation as the public viewed, for the first time, the accomplishments of the spirited students. The growl of Sylvan's "Golden Bear" has been heard throughout the state.

SYLVAN'S FIRST QUEEN
Pretty Sandra Brown

Len is the man behind the golden bear, always ready with an extra boost should school spirit lag. For every sports event, Len "dresses out" in the costume of a bear, created of special material (ordered from New York at a cost of $16 a yard) by Mrs. J. B. Woodall, whose son, Jimmy, is a '57 Sylvan grad, now a freshman at Georgia Tech. The spectacular head and face of the bear was made by Len and Susan Hutchinson (a '57 grad) who worked for seven days and nights to fashion it of papier mache, cotton wadding and cloth, then painted the smily face.

The "Twirlettes"—120 strong, all with batons—and the majorettes make a colorful entrance at all sports events. The twirlettes' uniforms are of black corduroy, trimmed with gold braid and white cord. Pretty Sandra Eubanks leads the group, dressed in black sequined tights. Connie Waites is the assistant leader, with Katherine Champion, Julia Brook, Sandra Presnell and Sharon Waller as lieutenants.

Majorettes, dressed in costumes of black and gold, topped by big hats sporting gold plumes, are led by drum major Janet Vittur, who wears a costume of gold sequins.

Twirlettes and majorettes, as well as the smoothly performing band, are under the direction of Robert Jenkins.

Sylvan's first home-coming queen is pretty Sandra Brown, who was crowned at a half-time show that featured all the pomp and ceremony of a royal coronation. The home-coming coronation, as well as the ring dance, also a "first" this year, will be annual events.

Student body officers who've also sparked Sylvan's championship school spirit, include Howell Hammond, president Janice Smith, vice president; Sandra Brown, secretary and Sandra Eubanks, treasurer. J. C. Fain, principal, has encouraged the students' in all their spirited endeavors.

SPRINGHILL, N. S. (AP) — Eliabeth Calder always wanted a bicycle but when she won one this week in a letter writing contest put on by a candy company she gave it away. Dare To Be Different!

Peg pants . . . red trousers . . . flat-tops . . . crew-cuts . . . jive terms. Georgia students see such things as examples of conformity, and while teen-agers are sharply divided as to whether or not teens dare to be different, only a slight majority believe today's young people are victims of conformity. Many urge teens to accent individuality. Others, defending the trend to "follow the crowd," offer various reasons.

In her winning letter, Fannie Teal, 17, Franklin, agrees teens are plagued by conformity, but declares it is the fault of the individual, rather than the group:

In school, teens have a great problem in remaining individuals. They are constantly trying to be like their friends so they will be accepted. They cannot be different no matter what the price of conformity is. . . . They want to be different, but somehow, they cannot make the break away from being like their peers. Good examples of conformity are the fads, idioms and other things common to particular age groups. . . . No one makes another go along with the fads, but for the sake of being accepted, some will do almost anything. If they cannot acquire the particular thing that is the current rage of their group, they become irritated and feel rejected. This is the point where conformity becomes troublesome.

Fannie Teal

The first step to remedy the trouble caused by conformity is to realize you are an individual. Then you will find that just because your friends have a certain thing or act a certain way, it does not mean you must do the same in order to be satisfied. One has to realize what he needs to be happy, and work for it. No two people want the same things, and no one thing will make two people equally happy. Only one plan can remedy the malady of conformity: The plan that makes one an individual and helps him remain so throughout his life.

Patricia Jones, 17, Franklin, believes most youths secretly prefer to be more of an individualist, but they are conformists because they do not want to be considered an outsider by other teenage friends. Patricia added "We see other people conform to things that we know they disapprove. We condemn them and follow right along behind them, doing exactly as they did. We cannot condemn others for being conformists until we learn to be more of an individualist ourselves." Pat Ray, 17, Fairburn, declares "Teens are plagued more by conformity in adolescence. As they begin to mature, they fear being different. . . . But teens are not letting their thoughts, ideals and standards be plagued by conformity. They still act according to their individual ideals." Richard Wootten, 18, Fairburn, points out teens must conform because they "must abide by the laws of school, home and community. They're told to do this, not do that. The question arises in their minds: 'Should I have done this? Should I have not done that?'. It's enough to worry any teen-ager!"

Myrna Jean Banks, 17, College Park, believes teens dare to be different and, she continues, "They do not want to be a carbon copy of someone else. They do not want someone else trying to be a carbon copy of them. A teen is an individual and wants to be treated like one." Dottie Spradlin, 17, Franklin, believes "teen-agers are not trying so much to be like each other, as they are trying to be like their friends' idea of what a teen SHOULD be. The only trouble is: Their idea may not be right. If a boy wants the approval of a group who thinks an ideal teen should drag-race on the highways, then certainly this kind of conformity is wrong. So the problem of conformity lies not in conformity itself, but in what the person is trying to conform to."

While admitting most teens follow a trend, habit or custom already established, Elvin Young, 17, College Park, declares "in some cases this is true, but in others, teens are so unusual they offset those who are conformists." Commenting that fads are true signs of conformity, William Fields, College Park, adds "parents are wise to look down on some of the teen-age fads. Students who take up all the fads are weaker in maturity than those who do not jump at every new fad." Arthur Priest, 17, Palmetto, observes "By going along with the crowd, bad habits are sometimes formed and a bad example may be set for others." Charlene Bennis, 15, Marietta, thinks "there should be more individualism—more teens who do what their consciences tell them, and their daddy's pocketbook allows. There should be more who talk to and go around with the intelligent ones, rather than some ignorant, popular ones. There should be more emphasis put on this subject in school!"

Charlene Bennis

Atlantan Lacrecia Bowdoin, 17, declares it is alarming to see how conformity has infected not only fashions, but political, religious and moral thinking:

The most obvious conformity is in the material world. Many teens seem to think if they do not have the same expensive clothes and cars as their friends, they are social outcasts. Such thinking, on the part of adults as well as teens, has upset the economical stability of the family by fostering excessive spending. . . . Rather than using wealth as a basis for judging a person, teens need to re-discover the greater desirability of a wholesome personality. Each should attempt to cultivate his own qualities of friendliness, leadership and conversationability. . . . By allowing ourselves to accept the thinking of others without reservation, we leave ourselves open to all those systems which would make slaves of us. Many of our greatest national problems stem from the reluctance of the people to exert the effort to think through their actions, accept the responsibility to act accordingly. . . . It is in moral issues that teens must realize the necessity of being bold in defending their beliefs, of being non-conformists, if need be.

Heard County High senior Wendell Rogers, 17, asserts teens are not plagued by conformity:

The teens are as wild as a young person's imagination and as varied as life itself. They vary from the young boy or girl going on a first date to the later years of going steady and later to marriage. There is conformity in teens, as in all other periods of life, for it is a necessary part of a democracy. There are laws and rules . . . that we must obey. A person has to conform to certain things to be able to have this organized society. But for someone to say the teens are plagued by conformity, would indicate to me that he is blind. The very principle upon which our country is based is one of non-conformity. This is best seen in our educational system, where we are constantly encouraged to be "individual," but not to the extent of infringing on another's rights. "Individualism" is a magic word, for it encourages a person to think for himself and stand for the things in which he believes.

MONROE QUEEN—Pretty Ina Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Thompson, is the '58 Home-coming Queen of Monroe High School. President of the senior class, Ina is president of the FTA, vice president of the Tri-Hi-Y and Latin Club, secretary of Beta Club. A cheerleader, she's also managing editor of the school newspaper, member of the Glee and M clubs. Tights Star In Holiday Giving Show

Sports stockings and stretch tights of nylon. In new colors that rival the brightest yule-tree baubles, are a sure-fire gift, not only for teen-agers but for their younger and older sisters, too. Tights in pencil stripes, miniature checkerboard patterns, heather mixtures, plus plain and novelty knits in colors as giddy as candy canes are exactly right for the snow and ice doings ahead.

And for supermarketing or airing the small fry on frosty mornings, no gift will receive more cheers than toasty warm sports stockings, that come in shades ranging from gold to forest green to hollyberry red.

Golden Chain A Smart Gift For Teen-Agers

"Good things in small packages" holds true in a smart gift idea. Give her a miniature on a fine gold chain—those tiny drops that may be heart or tear shaped, or in the form of a religious symbol. Made to nestle romantically in the hollow of the throat, they're worn alone by teenagers, or with a choker necklace by the mature and fashion-conscious.

Can Teens Help Preserve Spirit Of Christmas?

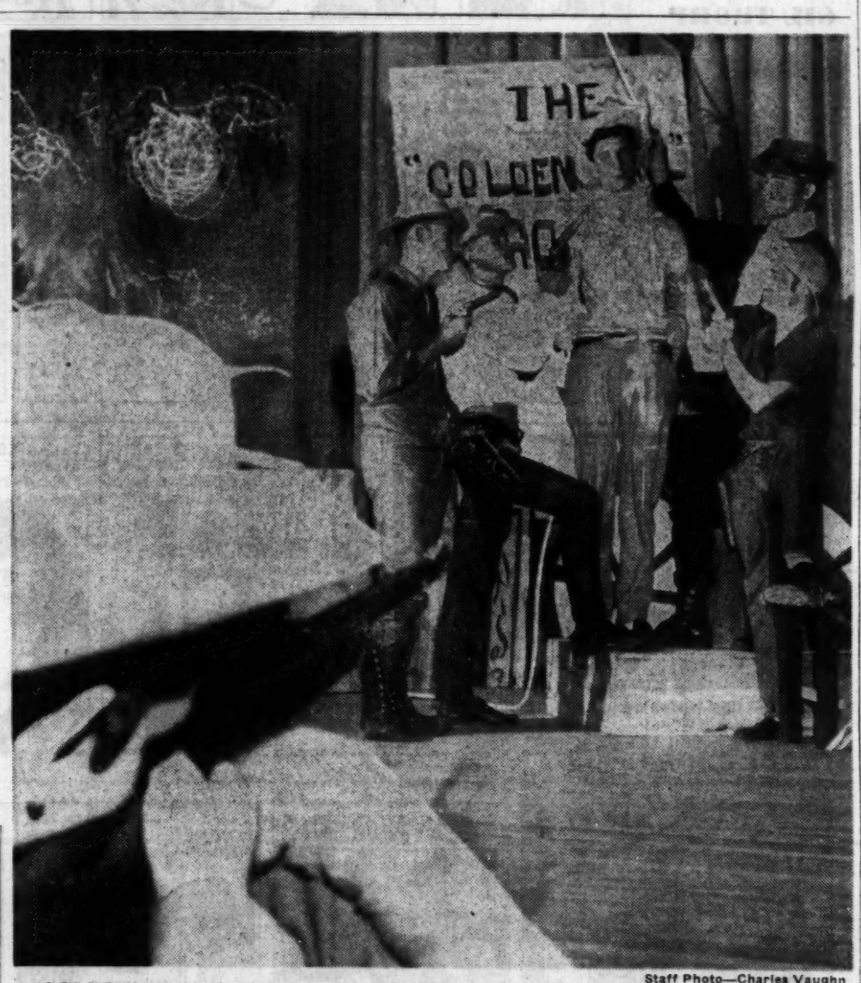

Last December, students wrote in the letters column that Christmas has become so commercialized the real spirit has been lost. They accused adults of being lax, allowing this to happen. How can teen-agers help preserve the true spirit of Christmas?

The Constitution will pay $10 to the high school student who writes the best letter on this subject, and $1 for each additional letter used. Address entries to Young Ideas Editor; include name, age, address, school and grade. Letters must be postmarked by midnight Tuesday, Dec. 9.

Parade Princess

LUDOWICI—Betty Ann Paul, 14-year-old freshman at Ludowici High School, represents the city in the annual Christmas parade in Savannah.

Daughter of Mrs. Norma Lawson, Betty Ann is a member of the Future Homemakers of America, and active in the Mutual Improvement Assn. of the Latter Day Saints Church.

"GOLDEN TRAILS"—Romance and adventure of the golden West took the spotlight when the O'Keefe Drama Club and the music department produced a play centered around the gold rush era. The play was such a hit, the student company was asked to present it for patients at the Veterans Hospital in Atlanta. The camera catches an important scene as Wilbur Price (with gun) goes to the rescue of hero Charles Sosebee, about to be hanged by miners Mahlon Owen, Jimmy Langley, Gene Ellis and Curtis Wright.

NASHVILLE — Joyce Roberson has been elected president of the Berrien High 4-H Council, with Bob Cornelius as boys' vice president.

Jeweled Pin Is 2-Way Gift

The personal touch means the most in gift giving. That's why this gift trick is sure to please. Choose a pretty jeweled pin and fasten it to a velvet hair band for a very special two-in-one gift for her this Christmas.

Gift Certificate Solves Problem

One of the very nicest ways to say "Merry Christmas" doesn't involve frantic shopping at all. Give her a gift certificate to let her have a favorite old piece of precious jewelry reset and modernized. Great-grandfather's jeweled cufflinks, for example, could make a handsome pair of earrings!

YOU may have been looking all year for a real buy in a good house.
HERE IS A REAL BUY:
A PRETTY brick house with 6 rooms, 1½ baths, central heat, eating space in kitchen and plenty of good closets.
WHY IS IT A REAL BUY:
WE BUILT the former owner a $20,000 house and took his "in trade." It is necessary to sell "trade-ins" in order to keep building, so we have priced the house at $13,000 for a quick sale and are making it available to a GI whose credit is good and who earns from $400 to $450 per month. Kindly call me for full particulars.

RHYME A DAY

By OLLIE REEVES

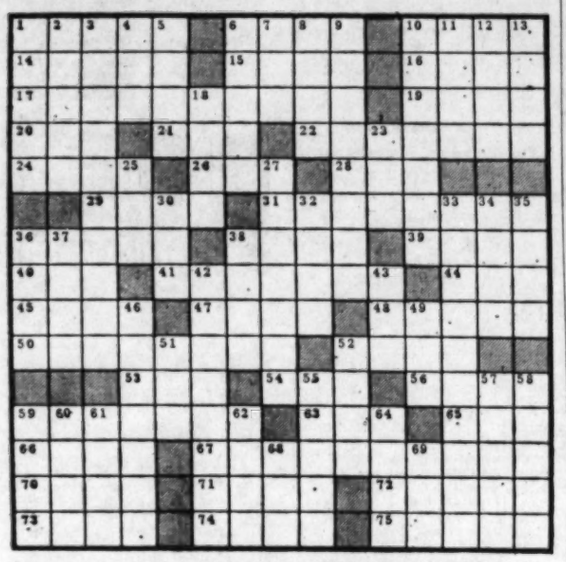

"Now we place some butter on this sheet of writing paper and look! This ball-point writes through it without a skip."—Television announcement.

Some of us can remember when . . . They first produced the fountain-pen . . . Which was a splendid name, I think . . . For it was always spraying ink . . . I mean it bubbled and it spewed . . . And if you left the cap unscrewed . . . There were great ink-spots on your vest . . . Your underwear absorbed the rest . . . Except the part that trickled through . . . and stained your skin with black or blue.

The ball-point pen is much improved . . . There is no cap to be removed . . . No ink to stain your finger tips . . . And, furthermore, it never skips . . . It is the marvel of our age . . . It writes upon a buttered page . . . So anybody who receives . . . A letter filled with buttered leaves . . . And cordial greetings at the end . . . Will know he has a greasy friend.

That is all we have to say . . . We're buttered-up enough today.

Talk Here Is Declined By Rogers

U.S. Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers declined an invitation to address the Georgia Bar Assn. on the school segregation dispute, Georgia Bar President Robert Heard said Friday.

Heard said Rogers, who represents the federal government before the U.S. Supreme Court, replied to the invitation that "because of other plans" he would not be able to address the lawyers at the conclusion of their midwinter meeting here Saturday.

EQUALLY CONVINCED

The letter of invitation to Rogers pointed out:

"Doubtless you are convinced of the accuracy of the conclusions and propositions of law which you summarized and discussed (in pro-integration speeches in other parts of the country) . . . We are equally convinced of their inaccuracy and inapplicability to the situation existing."

Heard said if Rogers had accepted the invitation, plans had called for a member of the Georgia bar to "speak following Mr. Rogers' address and to present our side of the school question."

In other activities Friday, the lawyers heard George D. Webster Jr. of the District of Columbia Bar outline 58 technical changes in 1958 federal tax legislation. About a third of the revisions were designed to make life easier for small businesses, Webster said.

PANEL DISCUSSION

Macon attorney Charles J. Bloch was moderator of a panel discussion on "What Every Lawyer Should Know About Appellate Procedure Practice and Methods." Georgia Supreme Court justices were panelists.

In an earlier panel, Cartersville attorney William A. Ingram called for speeding up judicial processes by shorter and more direct pleadings and by more pre-trial conferences. Such steps might cut operating costs of courts by as much as one third, especially in rural areas, he pointed out.

Shah, Blonde Paint Geneva

GENEVA (UPI)—The Shah of Iran danced through the night with a mysterious blonde beauty who clung to him tenderly.

The 39-year-old divorced Shah and his partner, dressed in a low-cut gown and swatched in mink, toured Geneva's night spots until well into the early morning hours Friday.

Iranian sources declined to identify the blonde, but said she was not an Iranian.

Pro Football Colts Tangle With Rams

PAUL JONES' PICK OF THE DAY—All eyes will be on the big professional football clash between the front running Baltimore Colts and the Los Angeles Rams, one of the highest scoring teams in the league.

The two grid giants tangle at 4:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

This will mark the first time this season that televiewers here have glimpsed these two teams in action, since most of our professional football entertainment is provided by the Washinton Redskins and their Sunday afternoon opposition.

John Unitas, the great Colt quarterback, will call the plays for the visitors and Bill Wade, former Vanderbilt star, will handle the ball for the Rams.

Bootleg Parade Hits Snag

Pfl. J. A. Thompson wondered if he had chanced upon a bootlegger parade.

Thompson spotted a suspected moonshine whisky car Friday on Shallowford road, near Roswell, and gave chase.

The driver abandoned his vehicle, which contained 136 gallons of booze, and fled on foot.

Thompson called for bloodhounds from Bellwood Prison.

While waiting for the dogs, he saw another auto whiz past. He jumped in his patrol car and gave chase.

The driver abandoned that car, which contained 126 gallons of moonshine, on Piney Grove road, a half mile away.

Both cars and the whisky were confiscated.

The drivers got away.

Moon in Reach, Russians Say

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Russian scientist said Friday the Soviet had the moon within reach. But there was no indication when they might try a moonshot.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda quoted Prof. Yuri Pobedonostsev, a Stalin prize winner, as saying that with instruments and power plants developed by Soviet scientists, "the task of attaining the moon is already technically feasible today".

The Hastings' Pecan (Plant Patent 1399) was first grown in Jasper County, Georgia, from the Stuart variety. The same high quality, flavor and good size as Stuart but with a shell so thin you can crack it with your fingers. We are indebted to Mr. G. T. Chaffin for bringing this great new Pecan to us following patient years of observation to determine its superiority. Some trees bear in 2 years but most begin in 5 to 6 years—even from the smaller sized trees. We are proud to attach our name to this outstanding variety and recommend it without reservation.

Asexual reproduction of Hastings' Pecan is prohibited except by written contract permission of H.G. Hastings Co.
